

DEPARTMENT OF VETERANS AFFAIRS AND HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT, AND INDEPENDENT AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 1997

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill.

Mr. HELMS. Madam President, what is the pending business?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. H.R. 3666.

Mr. HELMS. There is no amendment to the bill pending?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. HELMS. Therefore, it is open to amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

AMENDMENT NO. 5191

(Purpose: To increase funding for drug elimination grants)

Mr. HELMS. Madam President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask that it be stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from North Carolina [Mr. HELMS], for himself, Mr. BOND, Mr. FAIRCLOTH, Mr. MCCAIN and Mr. COVERDELL, proposes an amendment numbered 5191.

Mr. HELMS. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

"Of the amount made available under this heading, notwithstanding any other provision of law, $20,000,000 shall be available for grants to entities managing or operating public housing developments, Federally-assisted multifamily-housing developments, or other multifamily-housing developments for low-income families supported by non-Federal governmental entities or similar housing developments supported by private sources, to reimburse local law enforcement entities for additional police presence in and around such housing developments; to provide or augment such security services by other entities or employees of the recipient agency; to assist in the investigation and/or prosecution of drug related criminal activity in and around such developments; and to provide assistance for the development of capital improvements at such developments directly relating to the security of such developments: Provided, That such grants shall be made on a competitive basis as specified in section 102 of the HUD Reform Act."

Mr. HELMS. Madam President, I believe the pending amendment has been approved on both sides.

Mr. BOND. Madam President, if I may interrupt, with respect to my colleague from North Carolina, I think there was one additional change that had been suggested by the minority side. I have not seen whether that was incorporated.

Mr. HELMS. I think it already has been.

Mr. BOND. On behalf of my ranking member, I want to be sure that has been incorporated. They have worked very closely with us. We appreciate their cooperation, and we particularly appreciate your work on this. I apologize for interrupting. I wanted to make sure that change had been made in the amendment submitted to the desk.

Mr. HELMS. It is certainly no problem. I suppose we are talking about on page 39, after line 10 * * * "developments supported by", inserting the words "nonprofit private sources". Is that it?

Mr. BOND. Yes.

Mr. HELMS. That is the amendment that was submitted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there any further debate on the amendment?

Mr. BOND. Madam President, I was going to make a few comments in support of the amendment, and I suggest that we await the arrival of the ranking member before actually moving to adoption of the amendment.

Mr. HELMS. Yes, and I have a few remarks.

Mr. BOND. The Senator from North Carolina has some comments, as I will, on this measure. We do want to wait for the ranking member before moving to acceptance of the amendment.

I thank the Chair, and I thank my colleague.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, the pending amendment will markedly increase efforts to eliminate the scourge of drugs and crime in public housing project by increasing funding by $20 million for local housing authorities to stimulate the fight against drugs.

These programs help curb crime within public housing neighborhoods by providing funds to housing authorities that can be used to employ more law enforcement or security personnel, to establish voluntary tenant patrols and to sponsor programs designed to reduce illegal drug use in and around public housing developments.

Most public housing residents are law-abiding citizens who deserve to live in a community free of crime, drugs, and fear. Unfortunately, this is not the reality for many public housing tenants who instead are faced with daily assaults by drug dealers and criminals who not only rob them of their freedom, but also rob them of their dignity.

Many public housing projects are incubators for crime and drug dealing. Children sell and use drugs and, even worse, children shoot other children. This violence spreads throughout our cities and jeopardizes all citizens.

The Foreign Relations Committee, of which I am chairman, held a hearing recently on international drug trafficking and its effect on local communities. Among the witnesses were two law-enforcement officers from my home State and a member of the "blood" gang, who described the effects of street-level drug dealing in detail. One thing that was clear after their testimony was that we have seen only the tip of the iceberg.

While there is no one solution to the problem of illegal drug use, it is clear that any long-term solution must empower the residents to take back their streets and enable them to live safely in their homes.

The epidemic of drug use among juveniles has been confirmed by recent statistics which show that since 1992, teenage drug use in general has increased by 105 percent, marijuana use by 141 percent, and cocaine use by 166 percent. Drug abuse and the crime it spawns are rampant in public housing projects. The war against drug use and drug-related crime in public housing communities must be fought and won in the neighborhoods themselves. Enhanced law enforcement is critical to prevailing in the war on drugs. Towards that end, the additional funds provided by this amendment will allow local housing authorities to hire more cops and security guards to protect their residents.

Recently, there have been a number of stories that have documented the crime that occurs in these neighborhoods. Here are just a few examples:

March 30, 1996—"Already this month, two young men have been shot and killed in Durham's public housing communities, one in front of a crowd of young children." (The News & Observer)

July 24, 1996—"There is evidence that increased trafficking along the U.S. 64 corridor from Raleigh is occurring, and that public housing is a target for drug dealers." (The News & Observer)

August 17, 1996—"When Durham police found 18-year-old Germaine DeMarco Ansley shot and bleeding to death in Few Gardens last month, they knew there must be a witness in the crowd gathered around his body, but no one at the public housing complex would talk." (The News & Observer)

It's time to stand up with the folks who live in these communities and help them to rid themselves of the fear and crime in their neighborhoods.

Experience has shown that the residents themselves—who are most directly affected by drugs and drug-related crime—can do a lot to turn the tide against drugs when given the opportunity.

The success of the drug elimination grants is rooted in the fact that people who live in public housing are encouraged to save their own neighborhoods. And maybe, just maybe, we can prevent a few murders, stop a few drug deals, and give children the opportunity to grow up in a safe environment.

Mr. President, this program is effective, and it is working well in my home State of North Carolina as well as across the Nation. Through the use of this grant the following areas have shown marked success: The Durham Housing Authority reported that in 1994, there were 33 drug-related evictions in Durham public housing. The Charlotte Housing Authority reported that in 1994, the crime rate fell by 8.7 percent overall, and by 12.4 percent in the target neighborhoods when the drug elimination program was implemented. There were 104 drug arrests and 26 drug-related convictions.

The Greensboro Housing Authority reported that in 1993—the first year of administering a Police Neighborhood Resource Center at the Hampton Homes Development—violent crime dropped by more than 40 percent. Similar statistics have been shown across the Nation indicating the effectiveness of combating the war on both drugs and crime.

Mr. President, with these programs in place, local housing authorities and residents are doing their part to rid cities of drugs and their terrible consequences. I urge Senators to support this amendment, which will be offset by reductions taken from general administrative expenses, that will increase funding for this necessary and successful drug-fighting venture.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Madam President, I would like to comment on the amendment offered by the Senator from North Carolina. And as we do, I sincerely hope that the people of North Carolina are spared any damage from Hurricane Fran. We know your cousins in South Carolina are bracing for some pretty heavy weather. And as another coastal State, we know what these things mean. So I just, in a spirit of cordiality and collegiality, want the people to know in the Carolina's that we, in Maryland, are worried about them and are thinking about them.

Mr. HELMS. The Senator is most thoughtful. Of course, on behalf of the people of North Carolina, I thank her. I will say that the southeastern part of North Carolina and northeastern part of South Carolina, the people in both areas, as the saying goes, are living on a diet of finger nails right now. I thank the Senator.

Ms. MIKULSKI. We are very happy about the fact that this subcommittee that has so many wonderful agencies in it also funds emergency management. And right now, Senator BOND and I, in trying to decide how FEMA will meet its obligations, are also on those diets of finger nails, or any other one that might work, I might add.

Madam President, I think the amendment offered by the Senator from North Carolina indeed has merit. The whole idea of getting drugs out of public housing has been something that we have supported for many years. When I chaired this subcommittee I had the good fortune of working with the Vice Presidential nominee, Mr. Jack Kemp, who was the Secretary of HUD, and now Mr. Cisneros, on a focused approach to get drugs out of public housing. It was always our belief that public housing should be a steppingstone to a better life and not to be an incubator for drug dealers.

In the course of watching this effort develop, we were aware that there were certain gaps in the program. What were those gaps? That often the grand program to get drugs out of public housing was limited only to public housing, those horrendous, horrific high-rise public housing projects that often were tools of neighborhood destabilization rather than tools of empowerment.

But also we saw something else, that where the Federal Government has subsidized housing in other areas, that they too have presented problems. In my own home State of Maryland, there was a project called Riverdale in a suburban area. And it was owned by the private sector. We thought, oh, gosh, this was going to be terrific. Get rid of all the issues in public housing. But what did we see? A scurrilous landlord who did not do maintenance, who did not work with the county in being able to screen the residents, did not use the section 8 subsidies to modernize, keep the building fit for duty.

Guess what? It took on all of the trappings of the negative aspects of public housing, became poorly maintained, with neighborhood destabilization, and became an incubator of crime.

There were no funds to help the local police department or whoever to really deal with this. I think that is wrong. And what I like about the Helms amendment is that it will include those entities that are Federally assisted, multifamily housing developments or other multifamily housing developments for low-income families, supported by non-Federal entities.

That means that we will be able to make sure that whatever the Federal Government is involved with, we are going to make sure it is fit for duty, and fit for duty not only in terms of maintaining the physical structure, but, through the work of Senator BOND and myself, Senator D'AMATO and Senator SARBANES here, we now have something called "one strike, you're out,"—"one strike, you're out"—which means that if you have been arrested for a criminal act, you were not going to stay in public housing or section 8.

We are not going to subsidize criminal behavior if we are on the watch. We are going to get them out so that the poor people who want to see Federal help as a tool to be able to empower themselves to a better life—we want to help them, but we do not want to subsidize people who are part of the problem. We want to help people become part of the solution. That is why we like the conceptual framework of the Helms amendment.

I must say, I have pause about creating an earmark in CDBG. The reason I like CDBG, otherwise known as community development block grant money, is because community development block grant money was to be a block grant, maximum flexibility, minimum micromanagement by the Federal Government, so that local governments could best decide how to meet their needs. The rural needs of Maine are very different than the bustling metropolis of Baltimore City in the Baltimore-Washington corridor. Who could do what?

So at this time I do not think we should fuss about budget over that. I am going to support the Helms amendment here on the floor of the U.S. Senate. I will be happy to adopt it just on a voice vote. I understand the leadership from the other side of the aisle is considering the vote.

First of all, to Senator HELMS, I congratulate him on his thought—and his staff—behind this. I think it is about time we start really thinking about how, when the Federal Government spends its money, the taxpayers feel satisfied, and we should be creating opportunities, opportunities for the poor to help themselves. I believe now with our strong, no nonsense zero tolerance one-strike-you-are-out approach combined with the grant program and the initiative of the Helms amendment, that we can start making sure anything that the Federal Government is involved in in neighborhoods is not a tool of neighborhood stabilization, but a tool of empowerment.

I look forward to supporting this amendment by whichever vehicle is best to move it. I yield the floor.

Mr. BOND. Madam President, I thank my ranking member for her very strong and supportive words. I heartily concur with them. I extend my particular thanks to the Senator from North Carolina who gave us a reality check and really brought back to our attention the fact that crime, lawlessness, and insecurity, fear for personal safety, is a grave problem that affects everybody who lives in many of these assisted housing projects.

By targeting these funds for assistance for law enforcement agencies, I think the Helms amendment is going to go a long way toward improving safety and security for families and for the individuals in assisted housing. This is different from some of the programs that we already have. Many of the drug elimination grants are grants for a broad scale of activities. They are generally limited to Federal housing activities.

This amendment says that the CDBG funds can be used not only for federally assisted multifamily housing developments but for other multifamily housing developments for low-income families supported by non-Federal Government entities or similar housing developments supported by nonprofit private sources. So this gives us an opportunity to provide assistance not just to a federally assisted housing program but to a State, a city, or a private not-for-profit entity with a multifamily-housing development. These are the people who are most at risk. These are the people who have the most to lose if a foothold for crime, for drug activities, gets into one of these developments.

My colleague from Maryland points out a very important fact that a lot of people seem to overlook. It was Congress that said one strike and you are out. I think that kind of get tough with the people who have shown they do not deserve to receive taxpayer-supported housing assistance is a very large step in the right direction.

I have talked to an awful lot of residents in my State who have expressed fear or concern for their public safety, and if we can tell them that if one of their neighbors is convicted of a crime of drug use that they are out, they will feel better. With the funds available under the Helms amendment to include extra policing and extra drug/law enforcement efforts, we can take another significant step toward ensuring that these developments and the people who live in them—the families, the individuals, the elderly in many instances who right now are often held hostage in their own apartments, their own homes—these people will be safer.

Incidentally, we spoke yesterday about the repeated efforts that we have made in this subcommittee, in the authorizing committees, to let the local housing authorities designate some housing as elderly only, or some as disabled only, or some as mixed, because there have been grave problems all across the country—in many of those units, certainly some in my State—where there is a mixture of disabled and elderly in the same housing. The elderly are very fearful, in some instances because of criminal behavior.

Along with the one-strike-you-are-out policy and the additional resources available under the Helms amendment, I think we are going to take some significant steps toward assuring these people of safety in their own homes. That, along with food and shelter is certainly one of the most basic and compelling needs we ought to provide to those of our citizens who need our assistance.

I commend the Senator from North Carolina for giving us a boost, getting us started on this right track. I thank my colleague from Maryland who, as always, made improvements on it. I expect shortly we will either move to formal passage or adopt this amendment. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. HELMS. Needless to say, I am so grateful to both managers of this bill for their kind comments about the amendment.

Just to be sure that the amendment is modified as agreed to with the distinguished Senator from Maryland, I send a modification to the desk and ask that the amendment be modified.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has that right. Without objection, the amendment is modified.

The amendment (No. 5191) is modified, as follows:

On page 39, after line 10, insert the following new paragraph:

"Of the amount made available under this heading, notwithstanding any other provision of law, $20,000,000 shall be available for grants to entities managing or operating public housing developments, Federally-assisted multifamily-housing developments, or other multifamily-housing developments for low-income families supported by non-Federal governmental entities or similar housing developments supported by non-profits private sources, to reimburse local law enforcement entities for additional police presence in and around such housing developments; to provide or augment such security services by other entities or employees of the recipient agency; to assist in the investigation and/or prosecution of drug related criminal activity in and around such developments; and to provide assistance for the development of capital improvements at such developments directly relating to the security of such developments: Provided, That such grants shall be made on a competitive basis as specified in section 102 of the HUD Reform Act."

Ms. MIKULSKI. I ask the Senator from North Carolina, is that adequate nonprofit clarification?

Mr. HELMS. Yes.

Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that Senator BOND, Senator COVERDELL, Senator FAIRCLOTH, and Senator MCCAIN be identified as cosponsors of this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HELMS. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KEMPTHORNE). The Senator from Georgia.

Mr. COVERDELL. Mr. President, I rise in support of the amendment. I have enjoyed listening to the remarks of the Senators from Maryland, Missouri, and North Carolina about the importance of the amendment.

I bring a little bit of a unique personal experience to this. The first public housing was erected in my home city of Atlanta, GA, in the early 1930's, and dedicated by President Roosevelt. Today, there is more public housing in my capital city than any other city in America, save one, per capita.

To reinforce the importance of this amendment, let me say there have been numerous revelations of late with regard to drug activities in these projects. It is even suspected in our housing projects that drugs are being sold with impunity and have become the hub of a distribution system.

I have said many times that one of the great changes in the current drug epidemic that we are experiencing is the age of the audience infected. It has moved from age 16, 17, and 18 to 8, 11, 12, and 13. Many of these youngsters in these housing projects are being recruited systematically into becoming instruments of drug transactions themselves. It is an absolute tragedy.

One of the other ramifications, Mr. President, is that when these gangs begin to set up these instruments of distribution in housing projects and they come upon a disagreement, it is not unusual for the resolution to be a shootout. Very recently, in one of these drug-related shoot outs, an 8-year-old girl, Kimberly Session, was shot, and two of her friends were wounded, as she was playing at McDaniel-Glenn public housing project. Absolutely innocent—just out playing in her neighborhood. They are not even safe in their home.

Four-year-old Monica Rose Mae Carr was shot as a drug-related gang pumped 40 rounds into an apartment unit, striking her in the heart as she lay asleep.

In Atlanta public housing two-thirds of those affected by the drug crisis in the housing projects are women and children, 97 percent African American. In an analysis of the effect of violent crime, half of Atlanta's low-rise public housing units, the violent crime rate is 60 percent higher than the immediate neighborhood that surrounds it—all related to drug distribution, drug transaction, and drug gangs.

So in Atlanta, we are experiencing the cost and effect of rampant drug violations in crime and use in our housing projects. So I come to the floor briefly to echo support for the amendment offered by the Senator from North Carolina. It is well targeted, well-meaning, and it will have a very positive effect on a lot of our young people, not only in Atlanta, but throughout the country.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate?

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I know that the Democratic leader has no reservations about a vote occurring. The majority leader is testifying and would like a short quorum call. I suggest the absence of a quorum, and I believe we should notify Members that a vote will be forthcoming.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Ms. MOSELEY-BRAUN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AGENT ORANGE BENEFITS

Ms. MOSELEY-BRAUN. Mr. President, I salute the minority leader, TOM DASCHLE, for sponsoring the Agent Orange Benefits Act of 1996 which creates the benefits package for the children of Vietnam veterans who suffer from spina bifida, a congenital disease that requires lifelong medical care. Approximately 2,700 of our citizens would be eligible for the benefits conferred by this amendment.

Mr. President, you would think that legislation which help the sick children of our soldiers—children who have developed debilitating medical problems as a result of their parents' service in the Armed Forces who sacrificed to preserve the freedom and independent way of life that we all enjoy—that such a thing would be free of controversy. However, some of my colleagues are holding up this amendment. And quite frankly I think those reasons can only be characterized as puzzling. While I respect those who oppose this legislation on procedural grounds, I point out that what is being proposed in this amendment is not unprecedented. It is consistent with our overarching responsibility to legislate in the public interest that this amendment is put forward today.

The opposition's argument that the scientific evidence does not clearly establish a link between dioxin and other herbicides and spina bifida is particularly troubling. While it may be true that earlier studies did not show a nexus between spina bifida and agent orange, the most recent National Academy of Sciences Institute of Medicine study, entitled, "Veterans and Agent Orange; Update 1996," suggests more than a casual nexus between the horrible condition of spina bifida and the use of agent orange. Based on that study, which was commissioned by the Veterans' Administration in 1991, Veterans Administration Secretary Jesse Brown moved to provide presumptive compensation to the children of Vietnam veterans who are suffering from spina bifida.

Arguments that the Government does not have irrefutable proof and scientific certainty of the link between dioxin and herbicide and spina bifida beg the issue. It is a scientific fact, as the most recent NAS study confirms, that there is more than a casual connection between agent orange and spina bifida. Given this fact, I believe it is prudent—not to mention compassionate—that we err on the side of the innocent children who have been stricken with this horrible disease.

Furthermore, arguments regarding the proliferation and the cost of entitlement I think only serve to obfuscate or cloud the issue and fail to address the issue at hand, which is our responsibility to the children of those who bravely served our country during the Vietnam war.

I would like to point out—you have heard me make this argument before—that the truth is in America no one goes without help. Everyone gets helped. Every child with spina bifida who has been a victim of this situation will get health care treatment one way or the other. The only question is who will pay for it. Whether or not it is a family that is required to pay for the cost associated with the lifelong health care associated with this horrible illness, or whether or not it is the insurance companies which, of course, means that all of us who have private insurance pay more—whether or not it will be the ratepayers who pay—the insurance company bills will be made higher because, as you know, for those who are insured it does not cover the universe of people in this country who will need health care.

So here is really an efficient way of addressing these health care costs for which there has been a causal connection as demonstrated by the NAS study and, frankly, by common sense and observation.

The fact that we have so many people with spina bifida, which is showing up among the children of Vietnam veterans who were exposed to agent orange, ought to compel us to give the benefit of the doubt to those children and to the servicemen and women who served our country and deserve better than to be called upon to be put in jeopardy if they are not going to be able to pay for their children's health care because of their service.

Most important, the opposition places process over what I think is our duty, whether it is fairness, or whether it is our obligation or compassion, and does nothing to improve the well-being of innocent children who have been stricken by this disease.

I believe that we have a responsibility to care for the health of those who served in our Nation's armed services, particularly those who answered the Nation's call to duty in defense of democracy in a military conflict.

When our men and women joined the military we promised to give them the best training, the finest equipment, and to care for them and their families should they become casualties of war. Passage of this amendment is simply an acknowledgment of that commitment. While these brave men and women sacrificed for our community as a whole, it seems to me that it is our duty to keep our promise to them and to provide some means for the kind of support and medical expenses associated with this devastating disease.

We have a contract with our veterans—a contract that is both irrevocable and inviolate. If we break this contract we send a disturbing message to our men and women in uniform that America is giving lip service to their sacrifice and to their service and that we cannot be counted on to honor the commitment should there be a situation occur such as the birth of a child with a debilitating disease; that is, to care for them or their dependents should they become disabled as a result of their service to our Nation, and it ought to be something for which there is unanimous support by our citizens and society. I can think of nothing that would more adversely affect and impact the morale of those now serving in our Armed Forces than to turn our back on them for the condition of their sick children.

Mr. President, our responsibility and obligation to our veterans was best articulated by the most favorite of the favorite sons and daughters of my State of Illinois, Abraham Lincoln, who in his second inaugural address said: "To care for him who shall have borne the battle, and for his widow and his orphan * * *" Today, of course, we would acknowledge the contribution and participation of the men and women in our military in the defense of our country. That change notwithstanding, President Lincoln's words are as valid today as when they were first 131 years ago. In the spirit of our obligation "To care for him who shall have borne the battle, and for his widow and his orphan," or his children I think is embodied in Senator DASCHLE's amendment. I hope that we will recognize those arguments, notwithstanding the overarching responsibility that we have in this situation to support this legislation. It is sensible for us to do so. It is the important thing for us to do, and certainly it is in keeping with our inviolate commitment to the veterans.

So I rise in strong support of the amendment, and I hope that our colleagues will support it as well.

Thank you, Mr. President.

I yield the floor. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the role.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 5191

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, what is the pending business?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending business is Amendment 5191 offered by the Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I think we are ready to go to a rollcall vote.

Mr. BOND. But before I ask for the yeas and nays, I will advise my colleagues that while we have been at work here our colleague, Senator ABRAHAM and his wife, Jane, are the proud parents of a healthy baby boy. We offer them our congratulations and our very best wishes.

On the HELMS amendment, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there is no further debate, the question now is on agreeing to amendment No. 5191, as modified. The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. NICKLES. I announce that the Senator from Oregon [Mr. HATFIELD] and the Senator from Alaska [Mr. MURKOWSKI] are necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Oregon [Mr. HATFIELD] would vote "yea."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber who desire to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 98, nays 0, as follows:

The amendment (No. 5191), as modified, was agreed to.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BOND. I move today that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. BRADLEY addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey is recognized.

AMENDMENT NO. 5192

(Purpose: To require that health plans provide coverage for a minimum hospital stay for a mother and child following the birth of the child, and for other purposes)

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from New Jersey [Mr. BRADLEY], for himself, Mrs. KASSEBAUM, Mr. FRIST, and others, proposes an amendment numbered 5192.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The text of the amendment is printed in today's RECORD under "Amendments Submitted.")

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, this is an amendment that deals with the Newborns Act. It is an attempt to require at least 48 hours for a childbirth.

Mr. FRIST addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee.

AMENDMENT NO. 5193 TO AMENDMENT NO. 5192

(Purpose: To require that health plans provide coverage for a minimum hospital stay for a mother and child following the birth of the child, and for other purposes)

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, a number of my colleagues have expressed concern regarding a provision in the amendment just sent to the desk which appears to have a conflict in it. I wish to offer a second-degree amendment at this time to clarify the intent of the legislation. Specifically, language was added to the section on postdelivery care to clarify that it is the attending provider, in consultation with the mother, that determines the appropriate location for followup services in combination with an earlier discharge which is less than 48 hours. It is confusing as initially written because the amendment appears to give the mother the option of demanding home care regardless of the attending provider's assessment of their individual needs.

This decision is most appropriately made in cooperation with the provider and the mother. Therefore my second-degree amendment strikes the language which appears to conflict with this intent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator intend to offer this amendment at this point?

Mr. FRIST. Yes, I do.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Tennessee [Mr. FRIST], for himself and Mr. BRADLEY, proposes an amendment numbered 5193 to amendment No. 5192.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The text of the amendment is printed in today's RECORD under "Amendments Submitted.")

Mr. FRIST. Let me just briefly close by saying one other thing that this second-degree amendment does. The amendment guards against monetary incentives directed at discharging mothers and babies before the attending provider feels it is appropriate. Specifically, my second-degree amendment provides language sought by health plans to provide that nothing in this bill interferes with rate negotiators between a plan and a provider.

Mr. BRADLEY addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I welcome the second-degree amendment by the distinguished Senator from Tennessee. I do think he clarifies my own intent in the original amendment. I believe that it is important. It adds to the purpose of the original amendment.

Mr. President, the amendment I have offered and that has been second-degreed by the distinguished Senator from Tennessee I think is a very important amendment. His is offered on behalf of himself and me. I offered mine on behalf of myself and him, as well as the distinguished chairman of the committee, Senator KASSEBAUM, the ranking member Senator KENNEDY, Senator DEWINE, Senator MURRAY.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that all 52 cosponsors of this amendment be listed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

COSPONSORS

The following Senators have cosponsored the Newborns' and Mothers' Health Protection Act as of September 5, 1996.

Mr. BRADLEY. Of these cosponsors, 19 are Republican. So this is a bipartisan amendment and a bipartisan bill. What the bill does is very simple. It says that insurers are required to allow 48 hours, up to 48 hours, for a woman in the hospital after giving birth and requires insurers to allow up to 96 hours if that birth is a Caesarean section.

If the mother and her doctor choose to leave the hospital in less than 24 hours, less than 48 hours, she is permitted to do so. There is nothing in this bill that says that she cannot leave earlier. Followup care will be provided if she leaves earlier.

Mr. President, why is this amendment needed? Why are we offering this amendment? The answer is because all of us, I am sure, have received reports of women in our respective States being required to leave a hospital prior to 48 hours, in some cases prior to 24 hours. In California, for example, in 1994, for 1 in 6 babies that were born, the mother had to leave the hospital in less than 24 hours. That is for 90,000 births.

The problem here is that some illnesses do not develop until the second day. If the mother were in the hospital, they would be able to detect it and deal with it. A good example is jaundice, which does not really develop until the second day. Heart defects are another. What happens is that the mother is pushed out of the hospital. She goes home after 12, 14 hours, 16 hours, 26 hours. In the second day jaundice is detected, or worse, a heart defect, and the mother is rushed back to the hospital at a much greater cost.

In New Hampshire, for example, there was the study that showed that women who leave the hospital in less than 48 hours have a 50-percent increased risk of readmission to the hospital, a 70-percent increase in risk to be readmitted at the emergency room. So in the long run, by saying that someone has to leave in 24 hours, you are really saying it is going to cost more, it is going to cost more because the readmission and the treating of the more serious illness could have been avoided had she been in the hospital when it was first detected.

So, Mr. President, the need here is very clear. It is kind of common sense. I mean, my distinguished cosponsor on this bill, Senator FRIST, refers to a safe haven of time, 48 hours. That is why it is needed. Who supports this amendment and this bill? It is supported by the American Medical Association. The American Academy of Pediatrics supports this. The College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists supports this.

In fact, the Academy of Pediatrics, their recommended guideline is 48 hours. Gynecologists and obstetricians, 48 hours is the guideline they set. That is how we arrived at this number. Why 48 hours? Because the doctors in question recommended that. The obstetricians and gynecologists stated that, if we keep the 24-hour limit, "it could be the equivalent of a large uncontrolled, uninformed experiment on women and babies."

We all want to reduce health care costs. We can do so without jeopardizing the health of mothers and their newborns. Again, who makes the decision? That is really the question here. We believe that the person who makes the decision should be the doctor and the mother, that the decision should not be made by an accountant in a distant office seeking cost savings and forcing women out of hospitals within 12 to 14 hours after they have given birth to their child.

This is the basic question: Who makes the decision? We have stories all across the land of doctors who have been put under great financial pressure to discharge in 24 hours or less or they will be dropped from health plans.

So, Mr. President, this is needed because there is a clear health problem with women who are discharged too early. The 48-hour and 96-hour for Caesarean section limits were set pursuant to the guidelines of the American Academy of Pediatrics and the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists.

A number of States have already acted on this. Twenty-eight States have passed laws requiring a 48-hour limit. Why, then, do we need a national law, people ask. You need a national law obviously for the other States that have not passed it, but even if all of them passed it, you would still have many in a State that would be unaffected by the State law.

For example, we need a Federal law to get at the so-called ERISA plans, the self-insured plans, the plans of large companies like Boeing, IBM, 3M, Dupont, and others. They would not be affected by a State law because they are self-insuring ERISA, controlled by Federal law.

There is also another problem, at least in my State of New Jersey. There is a State law that says you have 48 hours, but the law says the State has no authority to regulate insurance companies that are headquartered in a different State, Mr. President. So there are large numbers of people who are not covered then, of course, in States like Kansas, Missouri, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, New York. You might have a 48-hour law in a particular State, but you might have a hospital in another State, and when you gave birth to the child in a hospital in another State, you would not be covered by the 48 hours and you would be pushed out of the hospital in 24 hours.

That, not coincidentally, would have been the case in my own family when our daughter was born. The birth was delivered across the line in New York—24 hours, you are out.

We need this national law in order to make sure women have 48 hours to stay in a hospital. There are some places, for example, in Kansas, 40 percent of the companies—only 40 percent—would be subject to regulation under just a State law. In some States, 75 percent of the women are uncovered because State laws do not and cannot reach them as they are now written.

Now, Mr. President, this is an issue that came to my attention because I had several letters from women who had been subjected to this rigid 24-hour-and-you're-out policy. Drive-through deliveries is what they are called. There was an article about it, after this came to my attention, in Good Housekeeping magazine, and someone, the author of the article, put a little box in the article that said if you care about this issue, write to Senator BRADLEY.

Mr. President, I have received, since that article appeared about a year and a half ago, more mail than I have received on any one issue, with the exception of interest and dividend withholding, in my entire 18 years. I received over 85,000 pieces of mail from women and families of women in this country who have been pushed out of the hospital in less than 24 hours. Now, I do not intend to read a long list of these letters—85,000 is a long time. We want to move this amendment as quickly as possible. Let me share two with you.

The McCloskeys, who live outside Philadelphia, write:

Our daughter Shannon was discharged from the hospital approximately 27 hours after birth. After only 8 hours at home, she went into seizures and we had to rush her back to the emergency room. She was diagnosed with streptococcus. The timing of our arrival at the hospital was critical, and we feared for her life. The doctor told us that if we had arrived at the hospital 15 minutes later, she would have been dead.

Linda Dunn of Knoxville, TN, writes:

We almost lost my grandson, Brantley, because of an early hospital release. Brantley was one month premature and was born via a Caesarean section. In spite of this, he was released with his mother only 36 hours after the birth. Within 20 minutes of arriving home, Brantley choked, quit breathing, and was rushed to Children's Hospital in Knoxville, where he was placed in neonatal intensive care and noted as having "a serious, life-threatening episode." The frightening part of the scenario was that if I had not been trained in infant resuscitation at my prior job, the baby would simply be dead.

Mr. President, if the baby were in the hospital, the baby would not have been even risking death. In the first 48 hours when some baby started to turn sort of a greenish color and jaundiced, it would be recognized and dealt with immediately. You are a first-time mother and you have a child, you are forced out of the hospital, you do not know quite what to do and you arrive home with the baby. In the first 24 hours you have a life-threatening health problem; you do not have anybody to turn to. Mr. President, that is why we need this bill.

I might also say that there were people who say you will not get any support from the insurance industry or HMO's, that they are the bad guys here. Mr. President, that is not necessarily so. We have letters of endorsement for this bill from one of the largest HMO's in the country, Kaiser Permanente. We have an endorsement from the HIP plan of New York-New Jersey.

Mr. President, this bill has 52 cosponsors, 33 who are Democrat, 19 who are Republican. This passed out of the Labor and Human Resources Committee 14 to 2. In the House, the leader on this legislation is a Republican, GERALD SOLOMON, with GEORGE MILLER as his No. 1 helper in this effort. They have over 150 cosponsors.

It is time to do this amendment. It is time to do it now. I hope we will pass it on this bill and that we will send it to conference and hopefully the conference will hold this amendment, say to those hundreds of thousands of women out there who are going to give birth in the next 6 months that you are not going to be rushed out of the hospital. You will have a little time to take care of the health problem of your child if it should develop. You will have a little time to gather yourself after an exhausting delivery. You will have a little time to get you and your baby off to a right start, a healthy start, because the U.S. Senate saw fit on this bill at this time to say that 48 hours is not too much to require an insurance company to give you after giving birth.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. THOMPSON). The Senator from Delaware.

Mr. BIDEN. I want to thank Senator BRADLEY. This issue was called to my attention by someone reading Good Housekeeping who asked me why everybody was writing to BRADLEY. I contacted Senator BRADLEY and wanted to know more about what he was talking about because I was hearing about this and found it hard to believe. You hear so many rumors today, so many people are upset about HMO's—much of it legitimate, some of it not legitimate—that you hear these horror stories.

Quite frankly, when I first heard this back in my home State, I really did not believe that some HMO's and insurance companies were actually doing this. I did not think it was a joke, but I thought it was a clear misunderstanding on the part of the people who were saying this was happening—24 hours and you are out.

This is, quite frankly, very scary. The potential danger is real. Think back, those of you women and men on this floor when you were young parents, to the first child you had and think back to when you brought that child home. I know this is a distant memory for some of us, myself included, but remember how it was. You brought that baby home, and when your wife turned and handed the baby to you, your first concern was maybe, "Is it going to break?" Or, "I don't know what I am going to do here, I'm not sure." Then your wife, no matter how instinctively good a mother she is, used to go, in the first couple days the baby was home, and literally lean over the crib to make sure the baby was breathing. How many of you actually leaned over the crib and stuck your ear down to see if you could literally hear the baby breathing? The reason I point that out is the baby was healthy. Your children were, 99 percent of the time, healthy and nothing was wrong. But the point is, you didn't know. There are so many young mothers. The tragedy is that there are teenagers giving birth to children. The tragedy is that there are thousands of unwed mothers out there. What do they do when they go home—you may say that maybe they shouldn't be in that position, but they are—without anybody even having an opportunity to instruct them on how to deal with the baby, what to look for? These are very basic little things, just basic things.

So I contacted the Delaware Medical Association and other doctors in Delaware. I wanted to know what their view on this was before I cosponsored Senator BRADLEY's bill. I was pleasantly surprised when the leading pediatri-cians and ob/gyn's showed up at a meeting I held and they unanimously supported the Bradley proposal. It was unanimous. Usually, you get some kind of heat when the Government is going to indicate that something must be done or when the Government is going to dictate something. In this case, it would dictate that an insurance company can't throw you out in 48 hours or 24 hours if the doctor says no. But here you had all these doctors, who are no fans of Government intervention, every one of them saying this is important. I will not take the time now to recount what they said because we want to move along. But, they gave me specific story after story, incident after incident, in just that one long breakfast meeting, of specific cases they had personally handled. This was 21 or 22 pediatricians and obstetricians. It amazed me. The intensity of their political views and the variation of their views was wide.

So the only real mystery to me is, why in the devil is it taking us so long to pass this? That is the real mystery. The mystery to me is no longer if it is needed; the mystery is no longer that enough Members of Congress want it; the mystery to me is, who is stopping it? Why? Who is stopping this? Why isn't it done already?

Now, you know the fact of the matter is that this is not the usual vehicle to pass this. I understand my friend from New Jersey concluded that he is getting all kinds of promises that we can bring this up and will have a chance to vote on it. I have not had a chance to speak to him about this point, but I assume the reason he is attaching it here is that his patience is running a little thin. He wants to make sure that before we go out of session we get a chance to act on something that clearly a majority of people want. So the biggest mystery to me is not why it is needed, not why it is important, not why do doctors support it, not why do mothers support it, but why hasn't it been done?

Now, I know that speed was not what my colleague was known for on the court—I am only joking, Senator. I want to make it clear that he could go to his left and right and he could do everything on the court. He is a Hall of Famer. But the fact of the matter is, the reason it is not being done is not for the lack of my friend's pushing it. Although I imagine we are going to hear that this is not the vehicle—the HUD appropriations bill—to put this on, we are running out of runway and running out of time. A lot of women and a lot of children are at risk. Some would say, oh, what difference does it make to wait another month? In another month we are out of here, which means waiting until next year, and waiting until next year means the end of the next year. So the health and safety of hundreds of thousands of women and children are at risk here. It is a really basic proposition.

Let me conclude by reiterating one point. A lot of my colleagues and individuals have asked me about this. And because they have not focused on it, I suspect, they did not understand one of the first points the Senator made when he took the floor, and that is, why don't they do it at the State level? Why not get this done at the State level? The Senator explained ERISA. The bottom line of this is that, in Delaware, only about 15 percent of the people with health insurance would be affected by a State law that my State is passing. My State is passing a law saying leave it to the doctor to decide. Notwithstanding that, those State legislators have come to me and said, we need a national law, because even with the State acting, and acting promptly, only 15 percent—15 percent—of the people with health insurance would be positively affected by the State law. To put it another way, the other 85 percent are out. They are out, without Federal legislation.

I see Congressman SOLOMON on the floor. I thank him for his leadership. I thank Senator BRADLEY on this side for calling my attention to this and making me realize that this was not some exaggerated criticism of HMO's—which I honestly thought was the case when I first heard it in my State, that this was one of these horror stories that had been blown out of proportion. It is real, it is genuine, and the bottom line is that this will make a difference in the lives of mothers and their children. We should not wait any longer.

I thank the Chair.

Mr. FRIST addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee is recognized.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, the bill before us, the Newborns' and Mothers' Health Protection Act of 1996, does one very simple thing. I refer to it as a "safe haven." It guarantees a safe haven for care of mothers and their newborn infants during the immediate postdelivery period. That period of time is 48 hours after delivery, that postdelivery period. I have been very aware of the potential for having Government get too involved, but it does this without excessive interference by the Government in the health care system.

As background, maternity care today—many people don't know this—is the most frequent reason for hospitalization today. Hospital stays of 24 hours or less have indeed become the norm in many parts of the country for those routine, uncomplicated vaginal deliveries. Sometimes hospitalizations are as short as 12 hours and even 6 hours. However, adopting this approach of a 6-hour discharge, or even a 12-hour discharge, to the general population, and not being able to predict every time which child will have a ventricular arterial contraction or a defect, it has not proven to be uniformly successful.

This bill ensures appropriate coverage. Let me make it clear. It does not mean 48 hours for everybody in the hospital. People can still be discharged at 12 hours or 24 hours. What this bill says is that the insurance company does not decide when you are discharged, but it is you, the mother, in consultation with the physician. The physician and mother decide, the two of them, not an insurance company.

Why has all of this become an issue today in 1996 when it was not an issue 8 or 10 years ago? Over the last several years, we have seen how these progressively shortened hospital stays have, in some cases, hurt new mothers and their infants. These cases that will be referred to have been brought to the attention of physicians, have been brought to the attention of the American people, and have been brought to the attention of the U.S. Congress. Problems for both the mothers as well as the infants—either one of them—can simply occur with too early a discharge.

Today with the evolution of care in our rapidly changing health care system there are certain dynamics which can and do raise their heads that encourage too early discharge overruling the mother and overruling what the physician regards as being in the best interests of that child or that mother. The decision for discharge should remain with the health care provider in consultation with the mother.

Changes in maternity stay have occurred over the last 2 decades. We only need to look back at older brothers and sisters and see how long they were in the hospital, or how long we were kept in the hospital and compare it to today. Mothers used to stay in the hospital routinely for 5 days or more. At the same time—remember this is not that long ago—infants were frequently isolated from mothers and brought to them only at nursing time. And mothers were heavily sedated during birth. And fathers very, very rarely were present at the delivery of their infants and children.

Over time—again it has been over the last 30 years—this type of delivery environment was recognized as being abnormal and unacceptable to many people—to parents who asked for more, and who won more appropriate care for this most natural of all events; that is birth. But increasing emphasis was placed on returning home as soon as possible. Many people wanted to get back home.

This legislation does not discourage innovation, creativity, new environments in which this delivery can be carried out; this birthing can be carried out. Alternatives to hospital delivery have become available. We now have birthing centers under the supervision of other types of health care providers, not just physicians, but midwives. All of this experience which has occurred in the last 20 years has taught us much about what is necessary, what is not necessary, what is safe, and what is not safe for the delivery during a normal pregnancy. Midwives carefully screen their mothers for such deliveries, prepare the parents for this experience, and visit their patients shortly after discharge.

And in this framework of carefully-crafted policy mothers and their newborns are frequently ready—yes, ready—to return home as early as 6 hours after delivery. But then on the flip side insurers—again not all insurers—but insurers seeing these results have been attracted by the successful outcomes and by the opportunity to decrease costs and free up funds which can be utilized elsewhere in the system—all of that can be a laudable goal. But an overvigorous institution of a policy of early discharge without enough attention paid to potential consequences when this approach is inappropriately applied has resulted in the situation in which we find ourselves today.

Health care providers—that is physicians and midwives—frequently feel undue pressure to discharge a mother and her infant before they believe it is in the best interest of their patients. We just simply cannot let that happen. I concluded that in this limited situation in which there has been excess interference in the exercise of a physician's best interest of the patient, a physician's responsibility for his or her patient, Federal legislation is justified.

Very quickly, what does this bill do? Number one, as I said, it provides a safe haven of time during which those making the decision about discharge are those most directly involved—the mother—and the health care provider. Many times I will hear from my medical colleagues who will tell me that sometime in that 48- or 96-hour period a health care provider will receive a phone call, and say, "We need to encourage your patient to leave earlier." Then you may think it is in the best interest of that patient. That is simply unsatisfactory today.

No. 2, this bill guarantees that in those cases where the provider in consultation with the mother decides that a mother and her newborn can safely leave the hospital before 48 hours, that the insurer, if they say they are in the business of covering maternity benefits during that 48-hour period, will provide coverage for these timely postdelivery care situations.

That is very important because some people come, and say, "You are forcing people to stay in the hospital for 48 hours." We are not. The provider and the mother decide about discharge. If it is before 48 hours, timely care must be given by that insurance company.

No. 3, this bill guarantees that there will no longer be undue pressure in the form of a monetary incentive to either the mother or the health care provider to discharge in less than 48 hours.

This bill does not do several things. Again, to understand the bill fully, we need to look at those things.

First, this bill does not require a mother and her newborn to stay any fixed time in the hospital.

Second, this bill does not require that a mother go to a hospital to deliver her infant. It allows other types of environments. It allows innovation within our changing health care system.

Third, it does not preempt laws or regulations passed by any State that provide already as much or more protection for the mother and her infant than is provided in this bill.

Many mothers are ready for early discharge, and many health care systems have the appropriate safeguards in place for this to occur, but not all, and that is why we need this legislation. With time more will provide appropriate prenatal preparation and follow up. However, now and in the future, it should always be the health care provider in consultation with the mother who will decide when the mother is ready to go home with her newborn child and to what environment.

The amendment before the Senate guarantees this period of time which I call a safe haven for this decision-making process to be carried out. It is the best and the only way to support the successful transition for mother with child to mother caring for child.

What will be appropriate for health care in the 21st century? There is no way for us to predict now and, thus, in this bill we have the flexibility to allow innovative solutions to the problems that may face us in the future. It is not a rigid bill.

Professional organizations such as the American College of Obstetrics and Gynecology and the American Academy of Pediatrics have endorsed the bill. Some managed care plans have endorsed the bill as well. The National Association for Home Care has endorsed the bill. The American Medical Association supports the bill and their comment is basically that this bill does not dictate medical practice nor lock medical care into statute. It restores the clinical autonomy of doctors and their patients to make the best decision about health care for women and their newborns. It provides flexibility for early discharge when both the mother and physician agree on an abbreviated stay.

It is also endorsed by the American Nurses Association, the Association of Women's Health, Obstetrics and Gynecologic Nurses, the March of Dimes Birth Defect Foundation, the Consortium for Citizens with Disabilities, the American Association for University Affiliated Programs, and a number of other organizations.

Mr. President, I opened by saying that I am not a fan of big Government intruding into our health care. But in very specific situations—situations where the care of patients is being restricted in many ways I think to the detriment of society—there is a point for Government to stand up. At the same time we must guard against a one-size-fits-all health care system, or to use the Federal Government to micromanage those difficult cost-benefit tradeoffs that every health care plan must make.

However, I do believe that there are times when it is appropriate for Government to provide guidance by setting national rules. This is one of those times. The challenge is to do so in a way that protects the individual but still allows the necessary flexibility for the system to respond appropriately and in a timely manner to a rapidly changing health care environment.

This bill does exactly that. Therefore, I urge all of my Senate colleagues to join me in supporting this important and timely piece of legislation.

Mr. DOMENICI addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I only want to ask a question. I am not going to speak.

Parliamentary inquiry, Mr. President. After this amendment is disposed of, is there some pending business by order or what will be the pending business?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. After the Bradley and Frist amendment is disposed of, the bill will be open for further amendment.

Mr. DOMENICI. Is there a time agreement on the amendment that is pending?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is not.

Mr. DOMENICI. And do I understand then a Senator taking the floor and getting recognized with an amendment would be the pending business after the disposition of this amendment? Is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. DOMENICI. I would like to state to the Senate that when this matter is disposed of, I do intend with the aid and assistance of my able friend, Senator WELLSTONE, to call up the compromise Domenici-Wellstone mental health coverage issue as an amendment if possible yet today before we finish.

I yield the floor.

Mr. WELLSTONE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. WELLSTONE. I ask unanimous consent that after this amendment is disposed of, the Domenici-Wellstone amendment be next in line.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. DOMENICI. I reserve the right to object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Does the Senator know I asked unanimous consent that our amendment be brought up?

Mr. DOMENICI. Yes. I had to reserve the right to object in behalf of the leadership because the manager deserves an opportunity to pass judgment on whether that should be granted.

Mr. WELLSTONE. I see.

Mr. President, I will just take a moment. I certainly thank Senator BRADLEY and Senator FRIST and other Senators for their leadership, and I am very proud to be a cosponsor of this amendment. I just want to make four points. The first one is the point the Senator from Delaware, [Mr. BIDEN] made.

I come from a State where very simple legislation has now been passed with overwhelming support. The problem is, as with so many of the self-insured plans, that people because of ERISA are just not covered at all. In Minnesota I think it is about only 40 percent of the people, actually a quite smaller percentage in Delaware. So we really have to do this at the Federal level to provide this protection for women, their husbands and their children.

My second point, an alarming one, is that too many health plans are refusing to provide the postpartum coverage both women and their physicians feel is necessary. Senator DOMENICI and I are going to talk about mental health. That is another example where too often in the plans you find discrimination or you sort of find a point where some of the limits set are arbitrary. That is exactly what is going on here. This is really an effort to deal with what some people call the drive-through deliveries.

I think this amendment is long overdue. It is not that often we can pass an amendment or a piece of legislation which so clearly connects to people's lives—women's lives, children's lives, husbands' lives, families' lives.

This is an extremely important amendment.

Again, point one is that we do need to do this at the Federal level to provide this coverage to people in the United States.

My second point is that we do have these drive-through deliveries.

Three, as referred to by my colleague from Tennessee, nobody is mandating that a mother stay in the hospital 48 hours. My daughter, Marcia, had a boy several months ago and in a day was more than ready to go home. But what I am worried about is the bottom line becomes the only line, and what you have is people discharged out of the hospital when they should not be and when they are in need of more assistance or when their babies are in need of more assistance. So I think it is extremely important on those grounds.

And the final point, which is different, is that I think this amendment and the fine work that was done in the House of Representatives speaks to a broader question. We are not going to get to it today, but I really do think that what is going on in the country is a major concentration of power in health care. The fact that there have not been a lot of changes taking place in the 104th Congress does not mean that there are not major changes taking place all around the country.

These are rough figures; I am just speaking from memory here, but something like the nine largest insurance plans control over 60 percent of the managed care plans in our country today. I am not trying to make any conspiracy argument, but what I am trying to say is when you move toward this kind of concentration of power and you find situations when women and their babies are leaving the hospitals, really forced to leave the hospitals because they do not have the necessary coverage where they should be there that extra day, that points to a larger set of problems, and I think we need to legislatively figure out how to build more accountability into the system, how to make sure some of the care givers are involved in setting some of these standards, how to make sure that there is more consumer protection, how to make sure that while we move forward with cost cutting or cost containment, all of which we need to do, the bottom line is not the only line because when it comes to the health of a mother and her newborn or when it comes to the concerns of families, there is nothing more precious than good health.

That is what this amendment speaks to in a very dramatic and very direct way, and I am very pleased to be an original cosponsor.

I yield the floor.

Mr. DEWINE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio.

Mr. DEWINE. Mr. President, I rise in strong support of this amendment. I believe it is a major step toward insuring health for newborn babies and for their mothers. For the last few decades, we have made great progress in medical care, pregnancy and childbirth. I have had the occasion, as my wife has, to see this firsthand. My wife, Fran, had our eight children over a pretty widely spaced period of time. We have had children in the 1960's and 1970's, the 1980's, and the 1990's. So we have seen a lot of changes.

The progress during this period of time has certainly been measurable. In 1968, for example, when our first child, Patrick, was born, there was relatively little in the way of prenatal education for the mother. Since then, with each new child, we have seen some truly remarkable improvements: Prenatal child birthing courses now for both parents, ultrasound, fetal monitoring during labor to detect problems, birthing rooms which have done a lot to make the whole process much easier and certainly much more humane. Fran and I have watched all of these innovations as they were introduced, refined and perfected, and we can both testify that as a result of these improvements today's mothers are better prepared to deal with their pregnancies in a healthy way and better prepared to give birth.

All that being said, we still have a long way to go if we want to make sure new mothers and their babies get the care they need. This amendment addresses one of the key areas in which we need to make substantial improvements. We can no longer ignore the fact that today's new mothers and their babies are often being moved out of hospitals far faster than a real concern for their health would allow. This is being done without any real consideration for what else needs to be done to compensate for that quick movement out of the hospital, what kind of additional care the mother and child need if the hospital stays are shorter and shorter, and shorter. Often, as we have already heard in the Chamber today, the mother and the baby are moved out of hospitals just 24 hours after the child is born, in some cases even less than that.

If you talk to doctors, as I have, they will tell you that they are under a tremendous amount of pressure to keep the new mothers moving out the hospital door. The pressure is coming on the doctors, coming on the mothers. It is coming on the hospitals. I think it is wrong. I think it is unconscionable. This is a decision, as Dr. FRIST said just a moment ago, that should be made between the mother and the doctor. That is who should be involved in this decision. It is a decision that should be based on the best interests of the mother and the child. It should not, frankly, be a business decision.

When our son Patrick was born in 1968, my wife, Fran, stayed in the hospital with him for almost 5 days. That was standard operating procedure in Hamilton, OH, in 1968. When our last child, Anna, was born in 1992, Fran stayed in the hospital for 36 hours, about a day and a half.

This trend is not bad in and of itself. In some cases, a mother might want to leave the hospital sooner rather than later. For example, back in January 1987, my wife Fran had just given birth to our son Mark, when a blizzard threatened to hit. In fact, she gave birth between two blizzards—one had come, then we went to the hospital, then we were worrying about the second one coming. So for her the choice was clear: either leave the hospital after a day and a half, or risk being stuck there for up to a week. Fran chose to take Mark home. That is what she did. The blizzard came just a few hours after we got home.

But it is not, therefore, a question of mandating hospital stays. Government should not be in the business of doing this. All we are trying to do with this amendment is to make sure it is the mothers and their doctors who are making this important choice, a choice that affects the health of the mother and the child.

It is also important that we not look at the number of hours mothers spend in the hospital as if it were an isolated issue or an isolated problem. I think we need to pay greater attention to the overall issue of postnatal care. The way my wife Fran likes to put it, it is time to make the same kind of investment in improving postnatal care as we have invested in prenatal care in recent years.

Let me tell another story which I think illustrates this. Last year, our daughter Jill gave birth to our second grandchild. At 10:55 p.m. on a Wednesday, the birth took place. At 2 a.m., Thursday morning, just about 3 hours later, Jill was being taught how to bathe the baby and other necessary information. At 7:30 that morning, they started marching Jill through three or four separate videos on child care. And by noon on Friday, she and the baby were out the hospital door. Jill, at least, was exhausted.

We all realize the doctors and nurses who take care of our young mothers and their babies are the best in the world. They are true professionals with the best combination of competence and compassion. But they have an incredibly long checklist—that is literally what it is today—a long checklist of things that they have to teach the new mother. Frankly, they do not have enough time to teach it in. Sometimes we forget the new mother needs some time to rest, too, especially after an exhausting labor, during which she may well have missed a night's sleep. Longer hospital stays very well may be an answer to these problems.

But, in addition to that, we have to look at the overall issue, the overall issue of postnatal care. Frankly, there ought to be more followup care for the mothers and their babies. As we heard in testimony in our committee, and as my daughter-in-law Karen just experienced when she had her baby, the enlightened insurance companies, the enlightened HMO's, are now building into the policy, building into the plan, this type of postnatal care, because the fact is that most doctors do not require a followup visit for a week or two. Frankly, as parents, sometimes it is hard to take a new baby out before then. We, therefore, need to consider the importance of followup in-home visits. This kind of followup care can make a huge difference, a huge difference in the welfare of the child.

We had an experience, I think, that would shed a little light on this as well. Our youngest child, Anna, was born 5 weeks early, but she appeared to be healthy and had no medical problems. My wife, Fran, and our daughter Anna, were sent home after 36 hours. But after a few days, Anna began to look slightly yellowish. Fran and I really were not worried. We knew it was common for breast-fed babies to become slightly jaundiced. Fran was watching her, and about the fifth day she took her to the doctor. It turned out Anna's bilirubin level was dangerously high. Even as experienced and educated parents—seven other children—we had not noticed the change and had not noticed how fast the change was occurring. If Fran had not taken her in when she did, there could have been medical complications. This whole incident was particularly scary for us. We felt we knew the danger signals, but we obviously missed them.

This is a case of a mother and father who had seven children, who had been through this before. If it was tough for us, can you imagine how difficult it must be for a young mother, with no experience at all, to detect some of these medical problems? Therefore, we need to do more in this area. In fact, when we were considering this legislation in the Labor and Human Resources Committee, some of my colleagues and I added the provision requiring a study of post partum care. I think this study is very important and is, in fact, included in the pending amendment.

Let me conclude by saying that today we are making, I think, a very good beginning. It is a very good beginning to deal with a problem that I have seen firsthand, a problem I have discussed with doctors and a problem that I have discussed with other constituents.

So, I commend my colleague from New Jersey, my colleague from Tennessee, and the other cosponsors of this amendment for the work they have done, the work they have done to refine the amendment and the work they have done to bring it to the floor of the Senate today.

I yield the floor.

Mrs. BOXER addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I rise in strong support of the Bradley amendment. I want to say to my colleague before he leaves the floor, I am going to miss him from this Senate. This is a perfect example. This is a Senator who understands what makes a difference in the lives of real people and goes after these issues with great skill.

I am so delighted to rise as, I think, the first Senator here who has ever actually given birth to testify that this is a very important amendment. I believe it will save lives. I believe it will spare families a great deal of heartache.

I will explain that. First of all, it is just incomprehensible to me that there would be a one-size-fits-all prescription being put out by so many of the HMO's today, when, in fact, each particular case is different from the one before. Not all women have an easy time giving birth. Not all babies have an easy time being born. There are so many complications, there are so many differences, so many problems. Senator DEWINE spoke, I think, from the heart, about having the seventh child and still almost missing a serious problem. I am going to address that in my remarks, I say to my friend.

I think it is important to note that this amendment really gives the flexibility where it belongs, to the patient and to the doctor. I strongly believe that, in any medical procedure, any medical issue, that is where the decision belongs, in the hands of the patient and the hands of the doctor. Childbirth is one of the most incredible experiences a woman can have. It is probably the most exciting—more exciting than winning elections. And, I have to say, it is also very difficult. It is usually very painful. Even in the best of circumstances, where everything just goes according to the book, if there is such a book, it is hard on the woman and it is hard on the baby—even a perfect birth.

In the old days when my mother gave birth to me—and that's the old days—she stayed in the hospital for a week or longer. When I had my children, I stayed in the hospital for several days. It was very important, because I gave birth to premature babies, and they were there in little incubators. In those days, they did not even let you hold the babies, but I so wanted to be close to them, and I was able to stay in the hospital several days while I got stronger, and I watched them happily grow stronger.

When my daughter gave birth just a year ago, or so, the hospital figured she would stay in for 24 hours. She asked her doctor if she could stay in for 2 days. She felt she needed that extra day. Fortunately, he intervened on her behalf and she got to stay in for 48 hours and was very grateful for that.

I do not think that should be a gift from an insurance company. I think that ought to be something that is absolutely a right of a patient. When we have gone from women staying in the hospital for a week or 10 days down to where they are being thrown out after a day, believe me, women are not any stronger today physically than they were then. It is the same thing. So it just doesn't add up.

Particularly new mothers need that option, it seems to me. They need to know how to nurse their children. That may sound strange, but I want to say for the benefit of my colleagues that nursing a baby takes a little bit getting used to. You have to learn how to do it. That added day in the hospital is very important to become comfortable with your baby, to understand the signs to look for if there is trouble. And that brings me to the issue that Senator DEWINE spoke about, the jaundice.

The fact is that many babies do become jaundiced, and it is easy to treat it with light, if you know what to look for. But many of these mothers, because it takes a while for the jaundice to develop, are out of that hospital within 24 hours and are not prepared, and terrible consequences can flow from that.

In the case of my own grandchild, they noticed something right before they left. They told her to watch for jaundice, and it happened. They had to come over and bring the little light boxes into the home.

So I just want to say to my colleague, that added chance, that extra 24 hours can make a great difference. I am very glad he put in the RECORD that Kaiser Permanente supports this. They are a huge HMO in California. I could not be more proud of them for that.

Again, I thank my colleague for bringing an issue to the floor of the Senate that is extremely important to the families of America. I am so proud that I had a moment or five or six to speak to your amendment.

I yield the floor.

Mr. WYDEN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oregon.

Mr. WYDEN. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, I, too, rise to speak in support of the Bradley-Frist amendment. I am going to be very brief this afternoon, but I did want to take a minute or two and discuss a General Accounting Office report that I will have coming out next week. The General Accounting Office has summarized a number of findings in a report for me, which report will be available next week, and I would like to discuss those findings very briefly.

First, it seems to me that, if you pass this important legislation, our country increases the odds that the next generation gets off to a healthy start. That is what this legislation is all about: getting off to a healthy start.

As I mentioned, I asked the General Accounting Office a number of months ago to help the Congress identify the risks attributable to foreshortened hospital stays for mothers and their newborns, as well as to analyze health care plans on how well they provide postpartum care.

The General Accounting Office has given me a letter, Mr. President, that I will make a part of the RECORD this afternoon, but I would like to summarize very briefly just four of the findings in the General Accounting Office report that they will have next week.

The first is the General Accounting Office has pinpointed studies analyzing readmission statistics that indicate that babies staying less than 48 hours do, in fact, have a higher rate of rehospitalization for health problems.

The General Accounting Office concludes that not every early discharge is a danger to each and every child, but certainly there are studies that do indicate that readmission statistics demonstrate that babies staying less than 48 hours do, in fact, have a higher rate of rehospitalization.

Second, the General Accounting Office has found that a number of the discharge plans are simply that they are just a drive-by delivery with no at-home follow up to ensure that the mother and the child are doing well.

Third, the General Accounting Office has found that while a number of the States do have laws on the books that deal with this practice, not all of the insured individuals, and certainly some of the most vulnerable of America's families, are protected by these laws. So I think it is fair to conclude that there is a very significant variation with respect to consumer protection in terms of State laws, and I think that, too, makes a compelling argument for the Bradley-Frist legislation.

Fourth—and I close with this point, because I think it is the most significant one and, in and of itself, makes the case for the Bradley-Frist bipartisan legislation—the General Accounting Office has found that a significant number of plans offer doctors alternative financial incentives for early discharge and significant penalties for keeping young mothers and babies in the hospital longer than the plans would like. So what we have—and I point out that this will be the first Government study looking at this problem—is already significant evidence that two sets of disincentives to good health for young families exists on the basis of the GAO report: first, the question of plans offering financial incentives for early discharge and, second, the matter of heavy penalties that the GAO has found in a number of instances for keeping young mothers and babies in the hospital longer than the plans would like.

What it comes down to—and I sure hope we get a unanimous vote in a few minutes with respect to this legislation—is that this Congress has a chance to put some votes behind all of the family-friendly rhetoric.

I am very hopeful that the Bradley-Frist legislation will pass on a bipartisan basis. I think that the Senator from New Jersey has contributed so much, but what an important bill on which to finish a stellar career.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD the letter from the General Accounting Office to which I referred.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

GAO, HEALTH, EDUCATION, AND HUMAN SERVICES DIVISION,

Washington, DC, September 4, 1996.

Hon. RON WYDEN,
U.S. Senate.

DEAR SENATOR WYDEN: To contain costs, some health care plans have adopted guidelines to shorten hospital stays associated with maternity care—the most common condition requiring hospitalization. Some plans have limited hospital coverage for mothers and their newborns to a maximum of 24 hours after delivery. As a result, between 1980 and 1994, the percent of 1-day postpartum hospital stays rose from about 9 percent to about 40 percent of all births. Many in the medical community have voiced concerns that these shortened stays expose newborns to undue risks.

To better understand the issues involved, you asked us to (1) identify the risks that are attributable to short hospital stays for maternity care, (2) examine health plan actions to ensure quality postpartum care for short-stay mothers and newborns, and (3) determine state responses to concerns about patient protection. To do this study, we analyzed pertinent trend data and interviewed medical experts and representatives from hospital maternity programs, managed care organizations, home health agencies, medical specialty societies, and health care trade associations. In briefing your staff on our work, we noted that our report would be available by the end of next week. In the interim, you asked us to summarize the results of our work. Our key findings include the following:

Guidelines issued by the American Academy of Pediatrics suggest—notwithstanding the presence of complications—either minimum 2-day stays for vaginal deliveries and 4-day stays for caesarean sections or shorter stays if: (1) Medical stability criteria are met, (2) the decision on length of stay is agreed to by physician and patient, and (3) provisions are made for timely, comprehensive followup care delivered by a maternity care professional.

Neither researchers nor medical experts agree about the direct effect of short stays on maternal and newborn health. Using hospital readmission rates as an indicator of adverse outcome, one recent study shows no association between the number of days a newborn spends in the hospital and the rate of readmission, while other studies show increased risk for newborns discharged within 48 hours of birth.

Some plans allow physicians flexibility to apply early discharge policies selectively. In addition, they have programs of maternity care services that include intensive prenatal assessment and education and comprehensive followup care provided within 72 hours of discharge by a trained professional at home or in a clinic. We found, however, that some plans with shortened postpartum stays do not provide adequate prenatal education or appropriate followup services. For example, some plans' followup care consists of a phone call rather than an actual home or office visit.

Early discharge policies have prompted more than half the states to enact laws that regulate the length of maternity stays but vary widely in degree of consumer protection and do not apply to all insured individuals. For example, states vary on whether the law specifies stay minimums, identifies discharge decision makers, or mandates number of home visits covered, among other things. The laws are also limited in jurisdictional scope in that they: (1) Do not apply to plans that are exempt from state regulation under the Employee's Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA) or (2) may not apply to individuals living in one state but working and receiving insurance in another.

Federal legislation has been introduced to make maternity care more consistent nationally and available to all privately insured women. The Senate is considering S. 969, Newborns' and Mothers' Health Protection Act, which would mandate a minimum 48-hour hospital stay for normal vaginal deliveries and 96-hour stays for caesarean section deliveries unless the attending provider, in consultation with the mother, makes the decision to discharge early and coverage is provided for prescribed timely followup care. Timely care is defined as care provided in a manner that meets the health care needs of the mother and newborn, provides for appropriate monitoring of their conditions, and occurs within 24-72 hours immediately following discharge. These provisions are consistent with the findings contained in our forthcoming report.

We hope that this information meets your needs in considering proposed federal legislation on hospital length of stays for maternity care. Please call me on (202) 512-7119 if you or your staff have any questions regarding the issues discussed above.

Sincerely yours,

SARAH F. JAGGAR,
Health Service Quality and Public Health Issues.

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, I yield the floor and will make for the Senators a copy of the General Accounting Office's findings a matter of the Record. I yield the floor.

Mr. HELMS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I thank the Chair for recognizing me.

I am so glad Senator BRADLEY came to me sometime back in October about this legislation and asked if I could become a cosponsor, which I readily did. I have not been a mother myself, but I have been around mothers. I am the husband of one, the father of two, and potentially the grandfather of five.

In any case, this Newborns' and Mothers' Health Protection Act, as it is formally titled, will be beneficial to countless mothers and their newborn children, because it will restore health care decisions to those best suited to make them—the mothers and their doctors—while making certain that new mothers and their babies are allowed to remain in the hospital at least 48 hours following natural births and 96 hours after Caesareans.

As Senators have already pointed out several times, in some instances new mothers and their babies are forced to leave the hospital as early as 8 hours after delivery because insurance companies often refuse to pay the bills otherwise.

It simply is unconscionable to require a new mother and her doctor to make this decision based on arbitrary insurance deadlines. That is what the distinguished Senator from New Jersey had in mind. I compliment him on this amendment and I am honored to be a cosponsor.

I am not alone in my contention that mothers and their physicians are better able to determine what is needed to promote a mother's and child's health rather than some arbitrary insurance deadline.

As a matter of fact, a Dartmouth-Hitchcock Medical Center study concluded that babies released earlier than 48 hours after birth had a 50-percent greater chance of needing readmission to the hospital and a 70-percent increased risk of emergency room visits.

Mr. President, the too-early discharges so often lead to jaundice which afflicts approximately one-third of newborns, dehydration resulting from breast-feeding difficulties and infections. Although these conditions are of course treatable, each must be diagnosed quickly, within 3 to 5 days, lest they result in brain damage or worse.

Mr. President, in recent years hospitals around the Nation have reported an increasing number of babies being readmitted to hospitals with complications of dehydration and jaundice.

A Virginia infant suffered dehydration-induced brain damage, and severe dehydration of a Cincinnati baby led to the amputation of his leg. The truth is that these tragedies could have been prevented with longer hospital stays.

Back in the 1970's, postbirth hospital stays were about 4 or 5 days for routine normal births, and 1 to 2 weeks for Caesareans. According to the Centers for Disease Control, the median length of hospitalization between 1970 and 1992 for mothers having normal births declined by 46 percent, from 3.9 to 2.1 days, and by 49 percent for mothers having Caesareans, from 7.8 to 4 days.

There is broad agreement, I think, about the importance of reducing health care costs and I agree with that. While I am convinced that this goal can best be accomplished through less, not more, Federal regulations, I also insist that the well-being of mothers and babies must not be compromised in the process. This amendment addresses a unique, isolated problem which can be addressed by a carefully crafted Federal rule. And that is exactly what Senator BRADLEY has done. And I compliment him for offering this amendment.

In short, Mr. President, the Newborns' and Mothers' Health Protection Act of 1996, will ensure that arbitrary insurance guidelines do not override the objective of healthy births.

I thank the Chair and yield the floor. The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BROWN). Who seeks recognition?

Mr. BRADLEY addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey is recognized.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. CHAFEE. I wonder if the Senator would withhold that.

Mr. BRADLEY. I withhold.

Mr. CHAFEE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, when I heard about this amendment of the Senator from New Jersey originally, my first thought was, why is the Federal Government getting involved in deciding how long hospital stays are? It seemed to me that was a matter that quite properly should be handled by States. And indeed in my State we have handled it. We have a bill, the best as I understand it, that is very similar to the suggestion of the bill proposed by the Senator from New Jersey.

Indeed, I made notes of the Senator's remarks. He indicated that some 28 States have taken action. That does not mean they have gone the complete route—and the Senator can obviously explain that further—but I take it some 28 States have dealt with this matter of how long a hospital stay should be or could be.

So I will confess that my original reaction was unfavorable to the Senator's proposal. However, two things happened. For one thing, my daughter called me. She has four children and she has some views on this subject. And also the ERISA point that the Senator raised. And I would like to explore that if I might.

Finally, the so-called Frist amendment. I am not sure exactly what the Frist amendment does. But my first question would be, of the Senator from New Jersey, as I understand it—first, I want to say, I listened to his arguments. One of his arguments is that you need a national law because you might have the State wherein the individual resides on a town right on the border of another State where the hospital is that serves that town, and the other State does not have the legislation.

However, I thought the most telling argument he made was the so-called ERISA argument. That is, as I understand it, that because ERISA applies to those corporations that have interstate health care plans, that the ERISA law prevents the State government—and we dealt with this, of course, when we were dealing with the health care business in 1994—the ERISA prevents the State law from getting involved with the plans that are covered by the ERISA statute.

I had not thought of that. And so first, if the Senator would be good enough to explain a little bit on that. Is that point correct?

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I say to the distinguished Senator from Rhode Island, yes, the Senator is correct. For example, we have had on the floor today the Senator from Delaware speaking. One of the largest employers in his State is DuPont. And we had the Senator from Minnesota speaking. One of the larger employers in his State is 3M. Each has what is known as a self-insured ERISA plan. And under a State law, in Minnesota or Delaware, as each of the Senators has testified today on the floor, it could not reach those plans in requiring them to allow 48 hours for delivery. Only this Federal law would achieve that objective.

Mr. CHAFEE. So your point is, to follow it up, it only would be a Federal law that would deal with that situation. The State law could not affect it.

The second point that would be helpful—maybe I should address this to the Senator from Tennessee. I am not sure exactly what the Frist amendment is. What does it do?

Mr. BRADLEY. I think I can answer. Essentially, the differences between the first- and second-degree amendments are minimal. The only difference relates to a deletion of the sentence that essentially is inconsequential but was confusing, and the second-degree amendment adds a sentence that gives some flexibility to health plans.

Mr. CHAFEE. Now, is this the so-called Kaiser Permanente language? Is that in the first amendment?

Mr. BRADLEY. I say to the Senator that in the first amendment is language that does allow some flexibility, and I think it would be in the first amendment. I think Kaiser Permanente endorsed both the first- and the second-degree amendments.

Mr. CHAFEE. Now, the final question, the number of States that have dealt with this you say is 28 in total or in part?

Mr. BRADLEY. The answer to the question is yes, 28 States have passed laws that require insurers to provide 48 hours for a delivery, coverage for 48 hours for delivery.

As the Senator has pointed out, there are a few gaps there. One is the ERISA problem; the other is the problem of the hospital that is across a State line in a State that is uncovered. Then there is the New Jersey problem. I guess some other State law might have that problem, but in New Jersey the State passed a law that said that the State requirement of 48 hours would apply to only those insurance companies that were headquartered in New Jersey. So you could be headquartered in another State and you would not be covered. This could get at that issue as well.

Mr. CHAFEE. I thank the Senator for that description.

As I say, I am troubled by the U.S. Congress getting involved in an issue like this. I found the explanation, particularly the ERISA argument, to be a very telling argument.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee is recognized.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, just to sort of further clarify, the Kaiser Permanente language was basically a clarification of the way it was written. It was written in the bill that if you are discharged in fewer hours than 48 hours—this bill says you have a safe haven for 48 hours and followup care has to be somewhere—you have to have care for 48 hours. You cannot be dumped out of the hospital after 6 hours, and that is the end of it.

What Kaiser said is you need to make it clear that it is the health care provider who determines, in consultation with the mother, as to where that followup care is delivered. In other words, it is not just up to the mother as to where the followup care during the 48 hours was delivered. That was written into the bill.

My amendment was to clarify that further.

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, I think that is an important point. I will give my qualifications in the area. I had six children. I suppose that would give me some knowledge about this subject.

As I understand it, if a mother should choose to leave in 24 hours—obviously, that is a big savings to the insurance company; say it cost $1,000 a day in a hospital, and I do not think that is outrageous and that suggestion is pretty much on the mark, or something like that—it may well be that the mother would vastly prefer being home but have some help at home, and maybe that help would extend for 5 days. How do you handle that?

Mr. FRIST. The health care plan can put whatever they want in. It has to be a minimum of 48 hours coverage. That coverage can be in any facility that the mother and the physician decide—not the health insurance plan—that they decide, during that 48-hour period. After that 48 hours after vaginal delivery or 72 hours after a C-section, it can be dictated by the insurance company.

Mr. CHAFEE. So in other words, the mother could say, “I want to go home in 24 hours,” but she would get the care, somebody at home would care, if she wanted, for the next 24 hours?

Mr. FRIST. That is right. It could be at home, a followup clinic, a birthing clinic. That is why it was important in this bill to give the flexibility. We do not know how babies will be delivered 4 years from now.

Initially, it was fairly rigid, 48 hours in the hospital. Now the bill is flexible enough to say for 48 hours you are covered, and it can be in the setting that you and your doctor decide, not some insurance company or not somebody sitting 500 miles away behind a telephone.

Mr. CHAFEE. Thank you.

Mr. BROWN. Mr. President, the Bradley amendment denies consumers the right to select the type of insurance coverage they wish to purchase. While I would hope all policies would include the type of maternity coverage he suggests, for the Federal Government to mandate it is a mistake. It establishes a precedent that consumers are no longer free to choose. I thus oppose the amendment.

Ms. MOSELEY-BRAUN. Mr. President, I want to take this opportunity to express my support for the Bradley amendment.

A few weeks ago Congress made an important step in the right direction of adding necessary reform to our health care system. By limiting exclusions for pre-existing conditions and by making health insurance coverage portable, we answered the concerns of millions of Americans that they will lose their access to health care. While I believe universal health coverage should be the ultimate goal, the Health Insurance Reform Act represented a practical, incremental, and caring attempt to deal with the real health care problems facing so many Americans, based on their everyday realities.

Similarly, the Bradley amendment makes an important step in the right direction. It is hard to conceptualize that the growing trend among health insurers is to force new mothers and their infants to leave the hospital 24 hours after an uncomplicated vaginal delivery and 72 hours after a cesarean section. In many cases, 24 hours is not sufficient time to recover physically from the birth, not to mention have time to learn essential child care information. You would think that this alone would be sufficient to warrant allowing new mothers to stay longer in the hospital. Having a mother who is strong and prepared to care for her new child will avoid unnecessary return visits to the hospitals due to insufficient care.

It is also important to note that many of the health problems newborns face such as dehydration and jaundice do not appear until after the first 24 hours of life. If undiagnosed, these easily treatable conditions can lead to brain damage, strokes, and in the worst case scenarios, death. There is no justification against monitoring babies that we know may be at risk for clearly preventable health conditions.

I do not believe that this bill is the panacea for health problems facing mothers and newborns in this Nation. The proportion of babies born at low birth-weight in the United States has been rising since 1984, and is now at its highest level since 1976. Nearly 300,000 babies, 7.2 percent of all those born in 1993, were born at low birth-weight. These infants were more vulnerable to infant death and serious health problems, such as developmental delays, cerebral palsy, and seizure disorders, as a result of their shaky start in life.

We need to focus more attention on making our children healthy on the front-end so that we never have to have a discussion about how long a new mother and baby should stay in a hospital. In 1993, almost 200,000 children were born to women who received either no prenatal care or prenatal care after the first trimester of their pregnancy. Good prenatal care can reduce rates of low-weight births and infant mortality, thus preventing disabilities and savings billions of dollars which are spent each year on caring for very sick newborns.

While the Bradley amendment is far from the total answer to the health problems of new mothers and their children, we should not underestimate the importance of what we will be achieving if this policy becomes law. Protecting the ability for mothers and infants to remain in the hospital up to 48 hours for vaginal deliveries and 96 hours for cesarean births has been endorsed by all four major medical groups which involved in maternal health and caring for newborns: the American Medical Association, the American Academy of Pediatrics, the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, and the American Nurses' Association.

I want to conclude by congratulating Senators BRADLEY, KASSEBAUM, and FRIST for their leadership and for all the hard work they have put in to building momentum for this important amendment. I strongly urge the Senate to adopt the Bradley amendment. I urge all of my colleagues to think about how much this bill means to Americans all across this country, and how critically necessary it is to make this improvement in our health care system. This amendment is another good step in the right direction.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I commend my colleagues, Senator BRADLEY and Senator KASSEBAUM, for their leadership in bringing this important legislation before the Senate for consideration. Current trends in health care financing have created a clear need for this legislation. Doctors are under increasing pressure from insurance companies to discharge mothers and newborns earlier and earlier.

Until a few years ago, the birth of a child was typically followed by a 4-day hospital stay for the mother and her newborn, so that mothers had time to recover from labor and delivery, and learn about the care of their infants. Health care providers had adequate time to watch the initial development of the newborns carefully, to assure that the babies were healthy. This initial period of expert observation is critical, since it means early diagnosis and immediate response and treatment when complications develop.

Now, however, the length of stay following a normal delivery is commonly only a day or two, and in many cases, even less.

To some extent, this change results from better medical management of childbirth, and greater responsiveness to women's desire for a less hospital-centered and more family centered experience of childbirth. But the dominant motivation behind these shortened stays, however, is the financial incentive to reduce the cost of childbirth, which is the most common cause of hospitalization in the United States. Profit, not sound medical judgement is driving the increasingly serious problem of drive-through deliveries.

The guidelines of the major medical societies provide for at least 2 days of hospitalization after a normal delivery, to give mothers adequate time to recover and learn to care for their infant in a restful atmosphere where professional help is immediately available.

Serious harm can result if a mother and her newborn are released too soon. Conditions such as jaundice and dehydration typically do not appear until after the first 24 hours of life. Recent research in Massachusetts shows that babies discharged less than 1 day after birth have a 25 times higher rate of not being screened for treatable congenital disorders, compared with babies who stay longer.

Many serious condition are not easy to detect. Long-term disabilities—even death—may result. Congress should not acquiesce in irresponsible insurance industry practices that put profits ahead of families and the bottom-line ahead of babies. This legislation will guarantee that mothers and their doctors—not insurance companies—decide when to leave the hospital after childbirth.

This legislation was written in accord with the recommendations of the two leading medical societies with expertise in this area—the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, and the American Academy of Pediatrics. They endorse this amendment. There is clear agreement among these experts that hospital stays should range from 48 hours for normal deliveries to 96 hours for cesarean sections.

By adopting this legislation, the Senate will not be requiring mothers and newborns to stay in the hospital unnecessarily. In many cases, mothers, in consultation with their doctors, will elect to go home early. But this amendment will guarantee that patient choice and medical judgment guide this decision—not insurance company orders.

I urge the Senate to support this important legislation. It has broad, bipartisan support. It is endorsed by the American Academy of Pediatrics, the American College of Obstetrics and Gynecologists, the American Medical Association, the American Nurses Association, the Association of Women's Health, Obstetric, and Neonatal Nurses, and the March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation. It is appropriate—indeed overdue—for the Federal Government to set these minimum standards for health and safety. Newborns should not be placed at risk for the sake of insurance industry profits.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I rise today in support of the newborns' and mothers' health protection amendment. I am proud to be a cosponsor of this legislation. This amendment is about family friendly health care. It puts the care of mothers and babies before the financial interests of insurance companies. It puts into practice what we have always preached—to honor the mother and to defend motherhood.

This amendment requires that insurance companies provide coverage for care for a minimum of 48 hours after a vaginal delivery and 96 hours after a caesarean section. It allows mothers and infants to be discharged earlier if there is appropriate follow-up care. This is consistent with the practice guidelines issued jointly by the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists [ACOG] and the American Academy of Pediatrics [AAP].

What I like about this amendment is that what we explicitly state as our values, we implicitly practice in public policy and public law. What we do with this legislation is ensure that mothers and their babies receive the care that they need, that is deemed appropriate by their physicians. On both sides of the political aisle, we talk about putting families first. This amendment does that. It puts value on motherhood.

This whole movement around providing care for 48 hours or 96 hours or whatever is medically appropriate came from mothers themselves. Then it was the movement of the extraordinary medical facilities that were willing to step forward and even defy the insurance companies. St. Agnes Hospital in my hometown of Baltimore insisted that they would provide this care if they had to do it out of a charitable endowment or if we all had to pitch in and do bake sales. St. Agnes took a stand—they were going to assure that mothers and their babies got what they needed when they needed it. That resulted in the Maryland general assembly acting—and now I am proud to say that Maryland has a law that really mirrors in many ways what we are doing in the Federal legislation.

So, I salute Senator BRADLEY for offering this amendment, but I also salute the mothers who organized, and the doctors and medical facilities who defied the insurance companies. I want to see managed care, but I don't want to see doctors managed. There is a fundamental distinction. We have to start getting our priorities straight and decide where we are going to be making our decisions. And in the case of newborns and their mothers—I believe decisions need to be made in the delivery room and not the boardroom.

I urge support for this amendment.

Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, as a cosponsor of the Newborns and Mothers

Health Protection Act, I am extremely pleased to rise in support of this amendment to the VA/HUD appropriations bill. My colleague from New Jersey, Senator BRADLEY, has worked steadfastly and diligently for well over a year to bring this important bill to the floor, and I commend him for his tireless efforts. I share his concern over the growing practice of what has come to be known as drive-thru deliveries, and I believe that this practice of discharging new mothers and their infants too soon after delivery is simply unacceptable.

This amendment requires health plans to provide coverage for a minimum hospital stay for a mother and her newborn infant following delivery, in accordance with established medical guidelines. These guidelines, developed in 1983 by the American College of Gynecologists and Obstetricians and the American Academy of Pediatrics, recommend that mothers remain in the hospital for 48 to 96 hours after giving birth, depending on the type of delivery. Shorter hospital stays are permitted if the physician, in consultation of the mother, determines that is the best course of action. For those mothers and newborns who leave the hospital after staying less than 48 or 96 hours, followup care within 72 hours of discharge must be provided in order to monitor both the mother and the infant during this vulnerable time.

Since 1970, the average hospital stay for newborns has been cut almost exactly in half. Today, many insurers provide for only a 24-hour stay for deliveries, while some medical plans call for discharging women within 8 to 12 hours of a birth. Usually, women are not informed of these policies until they are already in the hospital. Many doctors who decide, based on their best medical judgment, that their patients should stay beyond the short time-frame are overruled by insurance companies. Others are unduly pressured to release these women and their babies prematurely.

There are certain myths surrounding the impact of this bill, so I would like to clarify what this bill does not do. It does not mandate how long a mother and baby must stay in the hospital. It simply states that these patients may stay in the hospital up to the minimum period recommended by established medical guidelines. Insurers are permitted, and even encouraged, to develop alternatives to inpatient care, and to allow doctors, in consultation with their patients, to select the type of care which is most appropriate for a mother and her baby.

I believe that this bill is one of the most important pieces of legislation this Congress has and will consider in the 104th Congress. To date, stories abound about women whose infants have suffered physical harm and even death as the result of early discharge policies. No woman or family should have to endure such tragedy.

Often, doctors are not able to detect certain health problems in infants within the first 12 or 24 hours after birth. For example, doctors may be unable to detect jaundice—a disorder which may lead to permanent brain damage—within the first day after birth. Other infants have been released before their doctors had time to test them for PKU—an easily treated metabolic disorder that causes mental retardation if not detected early enough.

In addition, early discharge deprives mothers of important opportunities to learn how best to care for their infants, including proper breast feeding techniques. Problems with breast feeding can cause infants to suffer severe medical complications—even death—from dehydration. Hospitals report that increasing numbers of women and their children are returning for care after discovering problems such as life-threatening infections that could have been caught if the mother and child had been able to stay in the hospital just a little bit longer. While the financial costs of hospital readmissions resulting from early discharge can be astronomical, the human costs can be truly tragic.

Twenty-eight States have passed maternity stay laws similar to this bill, including my home State of Maine. However, State legislation alone does not sufficiently protect the women of America and their newborns. For example, many women are not protected by State legislation because they work for employers with self-insured plans shielded by Federal ERISA preemption. In addition, women who live in one State and work in another may find themselves vulnerable without Federal legislation.

Don't we owe it to the women of America and to our very youngest citizens—those who are only a few days old—to ensure that they enjoy the full protections and benefits of one of the best health care systems in the world?

There is nothing more precious than the birth of a child. There is nothing more tragic than the death of an infant that could have been prevented. That is why we must leave it to doctors, not insurers, to decide how long women stay in the hospital following delivery in accordance with established medical guidelines. I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting this important amendment.

Mr. FAIRCLOTH. Mr. President, I would like to comment briefly on the amendment offered by Senator BRADLEY, the Newborns' and Mothers' Health Protection Act.

Supporters of this legislation contend that it is becoming a widely used cost-containment practice of health insurers to force the premature discharge of mothers and their newborns from the hospital following childbirth. In other words, insurance companies supposedly are improperly influencing doctors' medical decisions regarding the appropriate lengths of stay for mothers and newborns following childbirth. The remedy proposed in this amendment would require insurance companies to cover at least 48 hours of inpatient care following an uncomplicated vaginal delivery and 96 hours following a cesarean delivery.

Mr. President, I certainly share the concerns which have been expressed in this debate regarding the health and safety of mothers and their newborn children. I am troubled, however, over the construction of this legislation. Not only would this amendment become the first Federal law to mandate health insurance benefits, it also comes dangerously close to being a statutory prescription for the practice of medicine.

I believe that no one is more qualified than a woman's doctor to judge how long that woman and her newborn child should stay in the hospital following childbirth. Just as I believe that an insurance company has no business second guessing this decision, I firmly believe that the Government also has no prerogative to interfere.

While I realize that this legislation does not require a woman and newborn to spend 48 hours in the hospital after childbirth; the construction of this amendment, and the specification of 48 and 96 hours of coverage, strongly implies that these figures are some sort of legally significant standard for the length of stay.

The sponsors of this legislation argue that legislation is necessary to ensure that mothers and newborns are assured an appropriate hospital stay following childbirth. Obviously, the appropriate length of stay will depend on each mother and child individually, and the attending doctor is the most qualified authority to make this decision. I am concerned that, according to this amendment's construction, the decision of the doctor is made an exception to the legislation's 48 and 96 hour standards, rather than the rule.

If it is necessary to pass legislation to assure the health and safety of mothers and newborns, then we should do it by protecting the authority of doctors to make medical decisions regarding their patients, free from interference from both insurance companies and the Government. We should not replace insurance company interference with Government interference.

Mr. BRYAN. Mr. President, I am pleased to be a cosponsor of the Newborns' and Mothers' Health Protection Act of 1996 introduced by Senators BILL BRADLEY, NANCY KASSEBAUM, and BILL FRIST.

This bipartisan legislation—with the support of 52 Senate cosponsors—will help ensure that newborns and their mothers will have the best possible beginning.

Unfortunately, a pattern has begun to develop throughout this country of pushing mothers and their newborns out of the hospital too quickly. Too often, some health insurance plans covering the costs of childbirth offer very limited benefits for post partum hospital stays.

Sometimes the coverage is limited to as little as 24 hours, which in many cases is not long enough to ensure that a mother and her infant remain healthy after their hospital discharge. Sometimes doctors have found that insurers refuse to agree to longer hospital stays, even when the doctor argues the mother and newborn need to remain in the hospital longer.

It is the first couple of days following the birth of a child that are the most critical to ensure the long-term health of both the infant and mother. Many mothers have difficulty in learning how to properly breast feed, putting their infants at risk of inadequate nutrition in their first days of life. Likewise some mothers are just not physically capable of providing for a newborn's care needs within 24 hours of giving birth.

Medically, many health problems experienced by newborns do not show up until after the first 24 hours of life. These include jaundice and dehydration, and other conditions that only health professionals can detect. Early hospital discharges can mean these conditions go undetected until it is too late.

The length of a hospital stay is a question that should not be driven by the limitations of an insurance policy, but should be the joint medical decision of the mother and her physician.

Under this bill, if both the mother and her doctor agree that a shorter post partum stay is acceptable, the stay can be shortened. However, in these situations—and this is the key distinction—the decision will still be a medical one, rather than a financial one.

This bill will require all health care insurance plans, which offer maternity benefits, to cover post-partum stays of at least 48 hours after a vaginal birth, and at least 96 hours after a caesarean section. The bill's hospital stay requirements are consistent with post childbirth guidelines of the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, and the American Academy of Pediatrics.

This bill will end these drive-through baby deliveries, which push mothers and their newborns out of the hospital before they are medically ready to go home. Such drive-through deliveries put the health of both mothers and their babies at risk. A mother and her newborn's homecoming should be a time of celebration, not a time of trepidation because neither was ready to leave the hospital.

In August, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention released its study of New Jersey's maternity stay law. Following enactment of The State's law, the CDC found that new mothers who had problem free deliveries were the mothers who had stayed in the hospital approximately 10 to 12 hours longer than mothers had prior to the law. The CDC research appears to indicate that just a few hours longer in the hospital can result in major improvements in the health of both the mother and the newborn baby. The importance of those few more hours cannot be underestimated.

Many managed care plans place the care of the mother and newborn infant at the forefront.

But many other managed care plans appear to have put the bottomline of profitability ahead of the real medical needs of newborns and their mothers. Those managed care plans should view this bill as a heads up. Cutting medical costs will not be allowed to undermine the quality of health care.

We all acknowledge the need for controlling health care costs, and support efforts to curtail unnecessary spending. But there also must be a reality check when cost cutting goes so far, that the quality of health care is endangered.

We want every newborn child to have the best chance for long-term health. I urge my colleagues to join in supporting this legislation to give mothers and newborns the assurance that their health needs will always be paramount.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I am pleased to support Senator BRADLEY's amendment to require health insurance plans to cover hospital maternity stays for 48 hours for routine deliveries and 96 hours for cesarean deliveries.

The issue here is whether the decision on how long a mother and her newborn stay in the hospital is based on the mother's health or the insurance company's bottom line.

I believe it is a medical decision that should be made by a doctor and a patient.

Before 1970 the median length of stay in this country for routine deliveries was 4 to 5 days. By 1992, the median stay dropped to 2.1 days.

In 1991—the latest year for which figures are available—nearly 40 percent of newborns in California were discharged in fewer than 24 hours.

And the problem seems to be even worse today.

Some insurers limit coverage of postpartum hospital care to 1 day or 12 hours.

One large California HMO has reduced coverage to 8 hours.

These are not generally doctors determining that it is in their patients' best interest to be discharged sooner. The reduction in hospital care is the result of insurance companies making that decision based on how much they want to pay—and the real cost is being borne by patients—mother and child—in greater health risks.

There are many medical reasons why a longer hospital stay may be necessary. Some medical conditions do not manifest in 10 or 24 hours after delivery, such as jaundice, heart murmurs, circulatory disfunctions and fevers.

Early discharges can also exacerbate medical problems:

Studies presented to the Senate Labor Committee have shown that early release of infants can result in the baby having jaundice, feeding problems, respiratory difficulties, metabolic disorders and infections.

In fact, a New Hampshire study of hospital readmission rates found that babies discharged at less than 2 days of age have a 70 percent increased risk of facing an emergency room visit.

Early discharge not only increases health risks, in many cases, it is so much more costly.

A Pasadena woman and her 6-week premature infant were discharged after only 23 hours of delivery. The baby was readmitted to the hospital for jaundice and dehydration 2 days later, costing an extra $20,000—$1,000 that had to be paid by the family.

Let me give some examples of the human impact of this problem:

A Los Angeles woman was released 15 hours after giving birth because of limited insurance coverage. Two days later, her baby was hospitalized for malnutrition—the infant had difficulty with lactation and breast feeding.

A San Francisco woman had to leave the hospital 23 hours after delivery against her doctor's advice, even though her baby was 5 weeks premature. The baby was in the emergency room less than 2 days later, and was readmitted to the hospital for dehydration and jaundice.

Another California mother was discharged less than 14 hours after deliver. The next morning she was shaking, feverish, and nauseous. She was diagnosed as having a staph infection and was readmitted to the hospital for 4 days.

Sometimes these stories have tragic endings.

Leigh Fallon, of Petaluma, CA entered the hospital on July 25, 1994. After 2 days of labor with extraordinary complications, she had an emergency caesarean section.

The mother had a high fever and great physical distress. Her baby boy developed jaundice, was being treated with antibiotics, and was diagnosed with a heart murmur.

Still, under pressure from their insurance company, Leah and the baby were discharged 72 hours after birth. The baby was rushed to the hospital a few days later and did not survive emergency heart surgery.

Perhaps nothing could have saved Leah's baby. But clearly, the decision to discharge such a fragile patient was made in the interest of saving money instead of saving a life.

Medical decisions should be made by medical professionals—not insurance companies. That is what they are trained to do.

Twenty-nine States have enacted legislation or regulations to curb what's called drive-through deliveries. In California, the legislature failed to come to agreement on legislation at the close of the current session. California voters, instead, will face two ballot measures which include regulations on the subject this November.

This is a national problem, and Congress must set a uniform standard in the interest of public health.

I urge my colleagues to join me in voting for the newborns and mothers bill.

Mr. BRADLEY. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mrs. KASSEBAUM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. KASSEBAUM. Mr. President, as an original cosponsor of the legislation before us, I would like to say how pleased I am that we are ready now to vote on what I think is a very important and useful piece of legislation. I have been proud to work with Senator BRADLEY and Senator FRIST, and I appreciate the efforts of those who have offered some very constructive improvements in the language that have helped to clarify some concerns that existed.

I have visited maternity floors at a number of hospitals. I must tell you, I think this amendment will provide an increased sense of security, particularly to first-time mothers, who will now feel that they can remain in the hospital a bit longer if necessary. Some will ask, "Why not even longer?" Well, how do we know the correct length of stay in each situation? This should be decided on an individual basis. But we do know that even an additional 24 hours is going to make a difference. For some, it will make a big difference—where there is no family available to offer support when they come home and, particularly, as I mentioned, with first-time mothers, where there is uncertainty about what lies ahead. I say thank you to all who have spent a great deal of time and effort on this amendment. It is a very constructive and beneficial piece of legislation.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

CHANGE OF VOTE

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, it was called to my attention that last evening there must have been some confusion. I take responsibility for it. I don't know what happened. I was incorrectly identified as voting against the motion involved in vote No. 267.

I ask unanimous consent that it be in order for me to have my vote recorded as voting in the affirmative in that instance instead of in the negative.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. I thank the Chair.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the vote on the Frist amendment No. 5193 occur at 5:35 p.m. today, and immediately following that vote, the Senate proceed to vote on or in relation to the Bradley first-degree amendment, as amended, if amended; further, that immediately following that vote, Senator DOMENICI be recognized to offer an amendment regarding mental health, which was previously listed as a Wellstone amendment, and that the preceding occur without any intervening action.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on my amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. BRADLEY addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey is recognized.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I strongly support the amendment of the distinguished Senator; the amendment to my amendment. I hope we adopt it unanimously by a large, overwhelming vote, and hopefully we will be able to move forward. It is an amendment that would confirm that insurers have to allow 48 hours for delivery of a child by a mother in the hospital, 96 hours for cesarean section. The Senator's changes are merited and important. It is a pleasure to work with him. I look forward to the 5:35 hour so that we can vote. Maybe we can move sooner.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The hour of 5:35 having arrived, the question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Tennessee. On this question, the yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. NICKLES. I announce that the Senator from Oregon [Mr. HATFIELD] and the Senator from Alaska [Mr. MURKOWSKI] are necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Oregon [Mr. HATFIELD] would vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 98, nays 0, as follows:

The amendment (No. 5193) was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 5192, AS AMENDED

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The vote now occurs on the Bradley amendment as amended. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 5192), as amended, was agreed to.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. FORD. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 5194

(Purpose: To provide health plan protections for individuals with a mental illness)

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senator from New Mexico is recognized to offer an amendment.

The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I just wanted to tell the Senators this is going to be the Domenici, Wellstone, et al., amendment that we have voted out here before on mental illness. I do not believe we are going to take more than 40 minutes on the entire amendment. We will ask for the yeas and nays. I would just like to make sure everybody understood that.

Shortly, I am going to send to the desk an amendment on behalf of myself, Senator WELLSTONE, and a number of Senators who have asked to be cosponsors, including Senator SIMPSON, CONRAD, KENNEDY, INOUE, REID, DODD, GRASSLEY, KASSEBAUM, BURNS, HARKIN, and MOYNIHAN, and I send the amendment with the cosponsors to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration. I ask Senator CHAFEE be added, and Senators HATFIELD and DORGAN also.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BENNETT). The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from New Mexico [Mr. DOMENICI, for himself, Mr. WELLSTONE, Mr. SIMPSON, Mr. CONRAD, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. INOUE, Mr. REID, Mr. DODD, Mr. GRASSLEY, Mrs. KASSEBAUM, Mr. BURNS, Mr. HARKIN, Mr. MOYNIHAN, Mr. CHAFEE, Mr. HATFIELD and Mr. DORGAN, proposes an amendment numbered 5194.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following new title:

TITLE —MENTAL HEALTH PARITY

SEC. 01. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Mental Health Parity Act of 1996".

SEC. 02. PLAN PROTECTIONS FOR INDIVIDUALS WITH A MENTAL ILLNESS.

(a) PERMISSIBLE COVERAGE LIMITS UNDER A GROUP HEALTH PLAN.—

(1) AGGREGATE LIFETIME LIMITS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—With respect to a group health plan offered by a health insurance issuer, that applies an aggregate lifetime limit to plan payments for medical or surgical services covered under the plan, if such plan also provides a mental health benefit such plan shall—

(i) include plan payments made for mental health services under the plan in such aggregate lifetime limit; or

(ii) establish a separate aggregate lifetime limit applicable to plan payments for mental health services under which the dollar amount of such limit (with respect to mental health services) is equal to or greater than the dollar amount of the aggregate lifetime limit on plan payments for medical or surgical services.

(B) NO LIFETIME LIMIT.—With respect to a group health plan offered by a health insurance issuer, that does not apply an aggregate lifetime limit to plan payments for medical or surgical services covered under the plan, such plan may not apply an aggregate lifetime limit to plan payments for mental health services covered under the plan.

(2) ANNUAL LIMITS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—With respect to a group health plan offered by a health insurance issuer, that applies an annual limit to plan payments for medical or surgical services covered under the plan, if such plan also provides a mental health benefit such plan shall—

(i) include plan payments made for mental health services under the plan in such annual limit; or

(ii) establish a separate annual limit applicable to plan payments for mental health services under which the dollar amount of such limit (with respect to mental health services) is equal to or greater than the dollar amount of the annual limit on plan payments for medical or surgical services.

(B) NO ANNUAL LIMIT.—With respect to a group health plan offered by a health insurance issuer, that does not apply an annual limit to plan payments for medical or surgical services covered under the plan, such plan may not apply an annual limit to plan payments for mental health services covered under the plan.

(b) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Nothing in this section shall be construed as prohibiting a group health plan offered by a health insurance issuer, from—

(A) utilizing other forms of cost containment not prohibited under subsection (a); or

(B) applying requirements that make distinctions between acute care and chronic care.

(2) NONAPPLICABILITY.—This section shall not apply to—

(A) substance abuse or chemical dependency benefits; or

(B) health benefits or health plans paid for under title XVIII or XIX of the Social Security Act.

(3) STATE LAW.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to preempt any State law that provides for greater parity with respect to mental health benefits than that required under this section.

(c) SMALL EMPLOYER EXEMPTION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—This section shall not apply to plans maintained by employers that employ less than 26 employees.

(2) APPLICATION OF CERTAIN RULES IN DETERMINATION OF EMPLOYER SIZE.—For purposes of this subsection—

(A) APPLICATION OF AGGREGATION RULE FOR EMPLOYERS.—All persons treated as a single employer under subsection (b), (c), (m), or (o) of section 414 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 shall be treated as 1 employer.

(B) EMPLOYERS NOT IN EXISTENCE IN PRECEDING YEAR.—In the case of an employer which was not in existence throughout the preceding calendar year, the determination of whether such employer is a small employer shall be based on the average number of employees that it is reasonably expected such employer will employ on business days in the current calendar year.

(C) PREDECESSORS.—Any reference in this subsection to an employer shall include a reference to any predecessor of such employer.

SEC. 03. DEFINITIONS.

For purposes of this title:

(1) GROUP HEALTH PLAN.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The term "group health plan" means an employee welfare benefit plan (as defined in section 3(1) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974) to the extent that the plan provides medical care (as defined in paragraph (2)) and including items and services paid for as medical care) to employees or their dependents (as defined under the terms of the plan) directly or through insurance, reimbursement, or otherwise.

(B) MEDICAL CARE.—The term "medical care" means amounts paid for—

(i) the diagnosis, cure, mitigation, treatment, or prevention of disease, or amounts paid for the purpose of affecting any structure or function of the body,

(ii) amounts paid for transportation primarily for and essential to medical care referred to in clause (i), and

(iii) amounts paid for insurance covering medical care referred to in clauses (i) and (ii).

(2) HEALTH INSURANCE COVERAGE.—The term "health insurance coverage" means benefits consisting of medical care (provided directly, through insurance or reimbursement, or otherwise and including items and services paid for as medical care) under any hospital or medical service policy or certificate, hospital or medical service plan contract, or health maintenance organization contract offered by a health insurance issuer.

(3) HEALTH INSURANCE ISSUER.—The term "health insurance issuer" means an insurance company, insurance service, or insurance organization (including a health maintenance organization, as defined in paragraph (4)) which is licensed to engage in the business of insurance in a State and which is subject to State law which regulates insurance (within the meaning of section 514(b)(2) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974), and includes a plan sponsor described in section 3(16)(B) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 in the case of a group health plan which is an employee welfare benefit plan (as defined in section 3(1) of such Act). Such term does not include a group health plan.

(4) HEALTH MAINTENANCE ORGANIZATION.—The term "health maintenance organization" means—

(A) a federally qualified health maintenance organization (as defined in section 1301(a) of the Public Health Service Act),

(B) an organization recognized under State law as a health maintenance organization, or

(C) a similar organization regulated under State law for solvency in the same manner and to the same extent as such a health maintenance organization.

(5) STATE.—The term "State" means each of the several States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, American Samoa, and the Northern Mariana Islands.

SEC. 04. SUNSET.

Sections 1 through 3 shall cease to be effective on September 30, 2001.

SEC. 05. Federal Employee Health Benefit Program. For the Federal Employee Health Benefit Program, sections 1 through 3 will take effect on October 1, 1997.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, first, I thank Senator WELLSTONE early on in the debate on this bill that is pending. He had the good sense to put the amendment in, and, thus, it became relevant under the unanimous-consent decree.

I thank him for his generosity in permitting me to call up his amendment, which is commonly known as the Domenici-Wellstone amendment. I am not going to take a lot of time. The U.S. Senate has heard me argue this issue a number of times.

I do believe in the 5 weeks that we have been gone—many of us at home—I think a lot of U.S. Senators and a lot of House Members have been approached in their respective States and districts with reference to the need to adopt this amendment and to make it part of the substantive law of this land.

I am counting on that, because I believe the U.S. Senate will adopt it by a rather overwhelming margin. But I do want to say to those who wonder whether or not we are just offering an amendment again that has passed and then did not see the full rising Sun and the beauty of daylight as a piece of legislation because the House had denied it in conference, that we clearly intend for the U.S. House to take a very serious look at this, even though it is in a conference and they have already passed the HUD and independent agencies bill.

I believe before this bill is finally conferenced that there will be many House Members on both sides of the aisle who will indicate their support. How we will go about doing that within the technical rules of the U.S. House, I am not prepared yet to discuss, but a number of House Members, both Republican and Democrat, want to help us get this amendment before the President as part of this appropriations bill.

Having said that, let me make sure that Senators and that those out in the audience, called America, whether it is families of severely mentally ill young people, or whether it is small businesses, or whether it is big businesses in the United States, this amendment is not the bill that passed that brought concern as to the cost to business. This is a very simple proposition.

This bill, let me make it clear, does not mandate mental health services or determine charges. It does not require parity for copayments and deductibles. It does not require parity for inpatient hospital stays or outpatient limits.

This amendment, as presented, does not cover substance abuse, and it does not cover chemical dependency. It excludes Medicare and Medicaid, to be handled separately in legislation with reference to those statutory benefits. It allows for managed care and mental health carve-outs, does not apply to individual health coverage, and exempts small businesses with 25 or fewer employees.

So I guess with that clearly understood, one might ask, what does it do? Essentially, this is a compromise to begin down the path of parity and non-discrimination for the mentally ill people in this country who have health insurance. It does just two very fundamental things.

The aggregate lifetime coverage on an insurance policy and the annual payment limits, Mr. President, must be the same for mental health coverage as for the physical health coverage.

In simple terms, if heretofore you bought an insurance policy and it covered mental health, with whatever conditions are attached—normally down here well into the policy it would say the aggregate lifetime coverage is $50,000, and up here in the bolder print it might say the coverage for everybody in this policy, not otherwise provided for, is $1 million. So if you get sick from cancer or a heart condition or tuberculosis or, God forbid, any of the serious illnesses, the lifetime coverage is $1 million under that policy.

But if you get schizophrenia when you are 16 or 18, which is within the age, between 17 and 32 or so, you might get that dread mental disease, this policy that I was just alluding to that is out there now would say mental health is covered, mental illness, but it would say for that one, you only get $50,000 worth of aggregate lifetime coverage.

This Domenici-Wellstone amendment says that will not be legal anymore, for it says if you choose to write that policy or if you choose to buy coverage as a big company and you buy a $1 million aggregate coverage for your employees for their illnesses, then if you want to cover them for mental illness, you have to cover them lifetime for $1 million also.

And if the annual payment limit, for those are common also—you may have a $1 million aggregate for your lifetime, but it may only cover $50,000 a year as the annual, or $100,000—it says that figure, too, for the annual limits has to be the same for the coverage provided for mentally ill people as for others with physical ailments covered in an insurance policy.

Frankly, Mr. President, I say to my fellow Senators, from where we started, I will confess to everyone, this compromise truly—truly—dramatically reduced our expectations and our hopes. But we understand. We have dramatically reduced the scope.

We understand that the first bill that cleared the Senate with 68 votes required the same exact coverage for the mentally ill as you provide for anyone else, for other illnesses. And we understand there was a concern about that in terms of how much it might cost. There was some concern expressed about what kind of treatment is treatment of the mentally ill. Is it just an ordinary visit to a psychiatrist because you have marital difficulties or because you have a very temporary kind of depression?

So what we decided to do was to scale back our desire and our hope for parity for this very important part of the American population and say let us get started by eliminating the hoax that exists in many cases where mentally ill people think they have coverage, but when you look at the fine print, the aggregate lifetime coverage is so small as compared to the coverage for other illnesses that, in many cases, it is a shock to those who have a family member who comes down with manic depression or severe depression or schizophrenia or one of the bipolar illnesses.

So we, to make it clear again, do not mandate the copayments. If you want to differentiate by having different copayments for mentally ill people and the coverage you provide, that is your privilege, that will be negotiated. That will be there in big companies as they work out how they are going to cover people. We do not mandate that parity to go down that far. We say just parity at the top, parity for the aggregate and parity for the aggregate annual.

We are starting down a path of at least beginning to understand that there are indeed millions of Americans who have members of their family with these dread diseases. Believe you me, the stereotype of old as to how these happen, where they come from, are all out the window. They did not come because a mother mistreated a child. They did not get schizophrenia because somebody neglected them for 10 years. These are very, very serious illnesses of the brain. Someday we will tie those down into very, very understandable physical treatments with medicines and other things which are already making dramatic, dramatic progress for this part of our population.

So we have a chance to just send a little ray of hope to the millions of American people, hundreds of thousands of families who have this kind of situation that heretofore your companies, if they are insuring you and your family through your employment, if they cover you for mental illness, then it will not be trivial coverage, it will not be a scaled-down coverage so insignificant that it hardly, hardly deserves being called coverage, because if you get schizophrenia or one of your children do or they get manic depression or they become seriously depressed where it becomes chronic for any period of time, anybody in this room knows those $50,000 lifetime limits do not cover it at all no more than they would cover for somebody who is desperately ill with cancer and needs 10 operations and chemotherapy and 6 months in the hospital. That $50,000 would be gone in 5 months or 3 months.

So we get a little bit of what we call parity. And we move just a little bit further away from the rampant discrimination that besets coverage for the mentally ill men, women, teenagers, young people across this land.

I repeat, when you vote for this tonight, many of you will have heard—many of the men and women in the Senate on their trips home and certainly many House Members in their districts will have heard from the Alliance for the Mentally Ill, thousands and thousands of their members. I have already run into two Senators who met their membership at home. And some were joking. I say to Senator WELLSTONE, because they seem to say your name right but they seem to say my name wrong. So they say you have to support that "Dominichi"—Wellstone bill. But that is all right just so long as we all understand what it is.

So Mr. President, at this point I am going to yield to Senator WELLSTONE. But I am wondering if we could get a time agreement to satisfy—we have a second-degree amendment being offered here. Before I agree to a time agreement, I want to see it. So I yield the floor.

Mr. WELLSTONE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I will be relatively brief because I know there are several other Senators who want to speak tonight. Senator KENNEDY has spent many of his years as a Senator fighting on behalf of parity and fairness for people struggling with mental illness, and others.

Mr. President, on April 18 of this year, 68 Senators voted for our amendment. This was really an amendment that said we ought to end the discrimination. There ought to be full parity for the treatment of mental illness in our country. I think what the Senate was saying—68 Senators, which is really a significant vote—was that for too long the stigma of mental illness has kept many in need from seeking help and for too long it has prevented policymakers from providing the help. We heard from a number of Senators who spoke in very personal terms about their own families and their own experiences—Senator CONRAD, Senator SIMPSON, and Senator DOMENICI.

Mr. President, their testimony was eloquent and powerful. But in addition

I want to point out tonight that there are also very sound policy reasons for supporting this amendment. I will not describe our amendment. Senator DOMENICI has already done so. But I do want colleagues to know that it is just an incremental step forward, but a significant one.

What we are saying is that when it comes to lifetime caps and annual caps, at least have parity there so that we do not have a situation where there is a million-dollar cap for someone who is struggling with cancer or heart disease and then you find out that if someone is struggling with mental illness all together it is a $40,000 cap or an annual cap of only $10,000.

This amendment would really help many families in our country who right now, given the present arrangement, which is an arrangement of discrimination and stigma, just face economic catastrophe. People just go bankrupt. People go under all too often.

So, Mr. President, this amendment is incremental. It is not full parity, but it would be an enormous step forward. As I said, it is not just the personal stories. Certainly I could talk about this tonight in very personal terms. We have done that already. But there are sound policy reasons. The MIT Sloan School of Management reported in 1995 that clinical depression costs American business $28.8 billion in lost productivity and worker absenteeism.

In addition, there are too many people in prison who should not be. There are too many children who could be doing well in school who do not do well. There are too many families under tremendous strain that do not need to be under so much strain. I mean, in many ways we talk so much about the importance of supporting families.

If we could pass this amendment tonight with a huge vote, and then work hard and get the support in the House—and I think we will. Senator DOMENICI is right, so many families and so many people who have struggled with this have been active. One of the things that has changed through organizations like the National Alliance of the Mentally Ill and others is that people no longer will accept the idea that because they have to struggle with mental illness they are somehow women or men of less worth or less substance or less dignity. People are speaking up for themselves.

I think if we get a really strong vote tonight—and I think we will—I think you will see many of those families working hard with Members of the House and we will pass this. And we should, Mr. President. It would make an enormous difference.

I said to my colleague, Senator DOMENICI, and I have said to other friends as well, that the only thing that troubled me that evening—I will never forget; I was very proud to be a part of this—was that at the very end the expectations of all of the people that had just risen, the hopes would just be dashed and people would end up just being devastated and discouraged and feel like it all was for naught.

We did not make it on the insurance reform bill, but this is not just a symbolic exercise tonight. We are hoping to get a huge vote from Republicans and Democrats alike. I think we have the support for this. Then we are hoping that in conference committee this stays in and this becomes the law of the land. It is not full parity, it is just incremental, but what a difference it would make. What a difference it would make for families that are struggling with mental illness. Mr. President, what a difference it would make.

I do not guess this is the most important reason, but what a difference it would make for all of the families that now are speaking for themselves and talking to Senators and talking to Representatives.

I see Senator CONRAD, and I talked about what the Senator said on the floor on April 18. I said I would never forget those words. I see he is here to speak. I do not want to cut into the time of others.

However, I think it is only old data and old ideas that have kept us from covering mental health the same way we cover other real illnesses, whether they are acute or chronic. Congress should pass this. The Senate should pass this amendment. We should pass it by a huge margin. It is a necessary and affordable step toward ending the stigma and discrimination against Americans suffering from mental illness.

Let me repeat one more time: This vote tonight, the larger the margin the better, will be a necessary and affordable step that we as Senators have taken toward ending the stigma of discrimination against Americans suffering from mental illness. Colleagues, Democrats and Republicans alike, to take that step is no small accomplishment.

I yield the floor.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Sarah Vogelsberg, a fellow in my office, be given the privilege of the floor during the consideration of this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, few forms of discrimination are crueller, more counterproductive, and more widespread than those inflicted on the mentally ill and their families. Lack of adequate insurance coverage for the severely mentally ill is a major factor leading to homelessness—and hopelessness. Illness is a tragedy for any family. Mental illness is a triple tragedy because the inevitable strain of coping with the illness is compounded by the unfair stigma associated with the illness and the lack of adequate insurance coverage to make treatment affordable.

Five million Americans suffer from serious mental illnesses every year. Few Americans do not have a family member, a friend, or a coworker, who has been touched by these tragic illnesses.

The financial burden of serious illness can be crushing, whether the illness is mental or physical, whether schizophrenia, heart disease, or cancer. For the majority of Americans, health insurance provides protection against the cost of treating heart disease, cancer, or other physical diseases, but this protection is shamefully less available for mental illnesses. There is no discrimination in insurance coverage against victims of heart disease or cancer, but there is vast discrimination against those afflicted with mental illness, and it is time for Congress to end it.

Every year, one in five Americans is afflicted by severe mental illness. Even mental illnesses that are less severe in the sense they are not chronic or do not have a clear biological basis can be devastating to individuals and families. Transient depression can lead to suicide. Mental health problems can result in divorce, child abuse, job loss, failure in school, delinquency, and substance abuse. The health costs of treating severe mental illness is $27 billion a year. The total cost of treating all mental illness is $70 billion a year.

Even these figures are far from reflecting the true cost of mental illness because such illnesses are often inappropriately treated in the health care system at a high cost with poor outcomes. It is estimated that adequate treatment for mental illness would save 10 percent of overall medical costs.

And these are only the direct costs. The indirect costs of severe mental illness—lost productivity, disability, and premature death—exceed $40 billion a year, and the indirect costs of all mental illnesses are far higher than that.

Mental illness is treatable and often curable. And treatments are becoming more effective every year. In fact, treatment for even very severe mental disorders is more effective than angioplasty, one of the most common treatments for heart disease.

Yet, insurance discrimination against mental illness is rampant, despite the fact that mental illness can be as devastating as any physical illness, despite the fact that good mental health care can actually save money, despite the heavy burden that mental illness places on millions of Americans and their families. Only about 11 percent of all employer-sponsored health plans cover treatment of mental illness as generously as treatment of other illnesses. Two-thirds of such plans place dollar limits on outpatient treatment. Eighty percent have more restrictive hospital coverage for mental illness.

Senator DOMENICI and Senator WELLSTONE offered a landmark amendment to end this injustice when the Kassebaum-Kennedy health insurance bill was considered by the Senate. Their full parity role made sense.

Five States have already adopted comparable laws. None has experienced significant cost increases as a result. If it works for Maryland, Minnesota, Maine, Rhode Island, and New Hampshire, it can work for the rest of the country.

Here is what the Governor of New Hampshire said:

In the 2 years since I signed this bill, this has proven to be an affordable and effective piece of legislation. . . I urge you to pass similar health reform legislation on the national level.

The Governor of Minnesota said:

Since the enactment of [our] law, there has not been a significant cost increase. . . I encourage you to support the Domenici-Wellstone amendment.

The Governor of Maine said:

Our experience with serious mental illness has indicated that providing responsive and supportive coverage upfront . . . is not only the proper public policy, but also has positive economic impact with very little upfront costs for our State.

The Domenici-Wellstone amendment, as has been pointed out, was approved by the Senate by an overwhelming 68-30 bipartisan vote. President Bill Clinton urged that it be enacted into law. Unfortunately, it was dropped in the House-Senate conference because of the opposition of our House Republican conferees.

Now on this bill we have another chance to do the right thing. The pending amendment is a compromise—a worthwhile downpayment on this basic issue. Under the amendment, the annual dollar limit and lifetime dollar limit for mental health services covered by insurance could not be less than the limits set for other health services.

The amendment does not address many other special limits often imposed on mental health services, such as higher copayments, limits on outpatient visits, or limits on hospital days. Like the original amendment, it does not limit in any way legitimate cost containment steps to assure that care is necessary and effective.

The cost of this amendment is minimal. At most, it may lead to a rise of four-tenths of 1 percent in health insurance premiums, according to the Congressional Budget Office. Other analyses estimate the costs may even be lower. And none of these cost estimates take into account the savings that better mental health care will provide.

Opponents contend this proposal is an unjustified interference with the rights of employers. We heard the same objections to the minimum wage, to laws outlawing racial discrimination in employment, to the Americans With Disabilities Act, and to child labor laws. The opponents were wrong then, and they are wrong now.

Americans with mental illnesses and their families deserve a simple justice from employers, from the health insurance industry, and from their Government. This is the Congress that can begin to show the common sense, the compassion, and the basic fairness that the mentally ill and their families deserve. I urge the Senate to adopt this amendment.

I join in paying tribute to my two colleagues and friends, Senator DOMENICI and Senator WELLSTONE for their efforts. They have fought long and hard to make this amendment a reality. Every family that will ever have a loved one who will need mental health care is in their debt. I also want to mention Tipper Gore, the Vice-President's wife, who has done so much to increase understanding of the need to improve mental health coverage and has worked so hard for mental health parity. Finally, President Clinton's untiring efforts in this cause deserve special commendation.

I urge the Senate to adopt this amendment—and I urge the Senate conferees to hold firm this time, so that the House extremists will fail, and that this long overdue measure will go to the President for signature.

This amendment has a special meaning for me and my family. In 1963, the first Presidential message on mental illness in history was sent to the Congress by President Kennedy. This message resulted in the passage of the first program to establish community mental health centers and provide community-based services for the mentally ill. And I am proud that, as chairman of the Committee on Labor and Human Resources, I had the opportunity to send to the full Senate President Clinton's Health Security Program, providing for full parity and comprehensive coverage of mental health services for every American. I believe the day will yet come when we will enact a program that assures the basic human right to health care for every American, whatever their wealth—and whatever their illness.

Mr. President, this Senate owes a great sense of appreciation to our two colleagues for fighting for this modest but enormously significant and most important program. I hope it will be carried by an overwhelming margin.

Mr. CONRAD addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota is recognized.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I want to join my colleague, Senator KENNEDY, in commending Senator DOMENICI and Senator WELLSTONE for offering this amendment.

The Senate has concerned itself with this issue several times in the past. Previously, when Senator DOMENICI and Senator WELLSTONE offered this amendment—a much broader amendment than this one—we got 68 votes on the floor of the U.S. Senate. In the reconciliation bill, I had this passed in the Finance Committee, and it passed on the floor of the Senate on reconciliation. So the Senate has considered a much broader version of mental health parity than we are considering tonight. This only relates to parity on lifetime and annual caps for mental illness. It is a small part of the parity provision that previously passed with an overwhelming vote on the floor of the U.S. Senate.

Now, Mr. President, this is a beginning. It is an important beginning, and we ought to make the start. It is the right thing to do. We ought to treat a mental illness in the same way that we treat a physical illness.

Mr. President, the last time I spoke on this matter before my colleagues, I talked about an experience I had when I was the assistant tax commissioner in the State of North Dakota. We had a receptionist who was struck by a mental illness. I recounted her case. I don't want to take the time of my colleagues tonight to repeat the specifics of that matter, but I will simply say that she was a young, vibrant woman, who one day was healthy—perfectly healthy, radiantly healthy—and the next day she thought the pictures on the walls were talking to her. Her life was badly damaged. In fact, she ultimately tried to take her own life.

Mr. President, it was in dealing with that case that I learned that, in this country, insurance policies frequently discriminate against those with mental illness. And it is a very serious matter, this matter of discrimination, because if you are so unfortunate as to have a loved one or a family member or, God forbid, you yourself are stricken, you will quickly find out that the coverage in most policies is dramatically different for a mental illness than a physical illness.

For example, annual caps, typically, for mental illness are $10,000 a year. For physical illness they are $100,000 or $250,000 a year, which is a dramatic difference. Believe me, if you are part of a family that has this awful thing happen to you, and you are up against those kinds of limits, you will find out very quickly that this can drain your family's finances. This can be devastating, not only in terms of the personal tragedy, but in terms of the financial tragedy that follows, as well.

Mr. President, this is a modest proposal. According to CBO, on average, this would increase health insurance premiums by .16 percent, not 16 percent, not 1.6 percent, but .16 percent.

Mr. President, this is the right thing to do. We ought to take this step. I hope my colleagues will join in on a bipartisan basis in passing the Domenici-Wellstone amendment. I thank the Chair and yield the floor.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I am very proud to be a cosponsor of the Domenici-Wellstone amendment, which provides for just a small measure of mental health "parity." I am also a cosponsor of the freestanding bill, S. 2031, the Mental Health Parity Act of 1996, which was introduced on August 2. I am—and will remain—deeply committed to this cause. I sincerely believe that the manner in which we address this singular issue will speak volumes about the true nature of the 104th Congress.

I want to emphasize as clearly as I can that this amendment does not ask for anything grand or far reaching. It would merely require health plans to provide parity with respect to lifetime caps and annual payment limits. In other words, if an existing health plan has a lifetime cap or an annual limit on what it will spend for medical or surgical services, that plan must either include services for mental illness in that total or have a separate ceiling for mental illnesses that is no more restrictive than the ceiling for medical and surgical services.

This very limited proposal would apply only in these two areas—for lifetime caps and for annual payment limits. It would not require “parity” for copayments or deductibles or any other aspects of health coverage.

Considering that the Senate has previously voted—on April 18, by a margin of 68 to 30—for an amendment that would have required a much more sweeping version of mental health “parity,” it surely seems to me that the pending amendment—which is so very limited in scope—should pass by an even larger vote. I would look forward to that.

But those of us who have been involved in this cause have learned not to take a thing for granted. Even if we are to win this vote, we know that we will confront myriad further roadblocks as this measure works its way through the legislative process in the remaining weeks of this session.

I still have a bit of a hollow feeling about our failure to include this reasonable compromise in the health insurance reform bill. In a bill that was so packed full of “mandates”—which is exactly what the health insurance bill consisted of—somehow this mental health provision was singled out as some terrible mandate that would “cost too much.”

As much as I don’t want to believe this, my gut instincts tell me that this outcome most surely had something to do with discrimination against the mentally ill. This Congress should not make this mistake a second time. I urge my colleagues to support the pending amendment.

Mr. BROWN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Colorado is recognized.

Mr. BROWN. Mr. President, I rise with a heavy heart to address this subject. I say heavy heart because no one could fail to be moved by the very eloquent statements that the distinguished Senator from New Mexico has made on this floor concerning this problem, both now and in the past. He has brought to light the problem that, I think, affects many Americans and has focused our attention on a very difficult aspect of the current health care policy.

On the major tenet that suggests that there are differences in coverage in this area, I must say, the Senator is exactly right. That certainly conforms with my understanding. There are differences in coverage with regard to mental health. He has eloquently put the case that many of the citizens who suffer from these infirmities suffer tremendous consequences because of the lack of insurance coverage in that area. I think he has done an excellent job in articulating the difficulties visited upon their families, not only because of the illness, but because of the nuances in the insurance policies.

Why would one rise to voice concerns? It is simply this, Mr. President. As this body requires coverage, or in this case sets limitations, fixes limitations, what we also do is not only help people out who are on the receiving end, but we establish the precedent that it is for the Government to decide what kind of coverage you purchase, not the person who is paying for it.

Mr. President, let us be very specific. If this amendment passes, consumers will be denied the right to pick the terms of coverage, or negotiate the terms of coverage they wish with an insurance company. We will have had the Government make that decision and not the consumers. Now, I put it to Senators that it is important for consumers to have choices. I must say that I think it is commendable that the Senators’ underlying amendment does not mandate the mental health coverage. It still leaves that open. I do hear—and I think he and others have acknowledged it—that it may have a tendency to have people drop mental health coverage from their policies, if this passes in its present form.

What we do if we pass this is say that consumers are no longer allowed to make a choice as to the limitations on the mental health coverage that they purchase. What we are saying is, you are going to have to buy a policy that will conform with these guidelines, even though you don’t want to. Now, Mr. President, I believe that consumers ought to retain that choice. I believe it is fair to require people to offer coverage, with the commensurate costs that it may involve, but I don’t think it is appropriate for us to take that decision away from consumers. Thus, Mr. President, I do rise with an amendment that I think clarifies the issue.

AMENDMENT NO. 5195 TO AMENDMENT NO. 5194

Mr. BROWN. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Colorado [Mr. BROWN] proposes an amendment numbered 5195 to amendment No. 5194.

At the appropriate place in the amendment, insert the following:

Notwithstanding the provisions of this title, consumers shall retain the freedoms to choose a group health plan with coverage limitations of their choice, even if such coverage limitations for mental health services are inconsistent with section 2 of this title.

Mr. BROWN. Mr. President, the amendment is very simple and it is very direct. It simply retains the matter of choice in the consumer. If you think the consumer ought to be able to purchase the protection that they wish, you will want to vote for this amendment because it makes it clear that consumers can end up making that choice themselves. If you wish to deny the consumer the right to purchase the coverage that they prefer, you will want to vote against the amendment.

Mr. President, I think underlying this is a very important principle. Should we force people to buy coverage they do not want to buy? There are good arguments on both sides, incidentally. I will certainly concede that. I will concede that the case the distinguished Senator from New Mexico brings for his amendment is one of the most heart-rending and eloquent presentations I have ever listened to.

So, Mr. President, I also believe it is important in this land of freedom to retain freedom of choice for consumers. Thus, I offer my amendment here on the floor.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I do not know if there are any other Senators who want to speak in behalf of the Domenici-Wellstone, et al., amendment. I understand the Chair would like to speak. I will personally relieve him shortly so he can speak. But let me make a comment about the Brown amendment, after which I will move to table it once Senators who want to speak have had an opportunity to do so.

Let me just make a case here. Fellow Senators, we just passed a Kassebaum-Kennedy health reform bill. What did we say in it with reference to preexisting conditions? We said insurance companies can no longer deny coverage because of preexisting conditions. We could have had a distinguished Senator like the Senator from Colorado—and he is distinguished—come to the floor and say, “But we ought to have the consumers retain the right to choose.” So we could offer an amendment here that would have said it. But we need to protect the consumers’ choice.

So we are saying you have to do this; you have to cover the preexisting conditions, but the consumer ought to have the choice, and he ought to be able to opt out. You see what that did. Nobody dared do it—not even my distinguished friend from Colorado—because that produced what we all call cherry picking. It permits people to offer coverage at the lowest possible rate denying coverage to many, many people and leaving those to somebody else.

I cited here on the floor where cherry picking came from. I thought it came from the basketball player where, when the fellow didn’t want to get into the game of getting rebounds, he stood out on the side over there and let the other people do all the work. And he would run down, and they throw him the ball, and he would get to cherry pick the basket.

What the Senator is doing here in this amendment, which sounds great, is he is taking a provision that we are offering that says simply the following:

If an insurance company chooses to cover mental health—let me repeat; if they choose to cover mental health. Implicitly they do not have to cover mental health. I would assume they will offer policies without coverage for mental health. I assume that exists today. It will exist tomorrow. It will exist a year from now if this becomes law. Companies will offer policies with no mental health coverage, and that is available for those consumers who want to choose that. But it will also offer mental health coverage. All we are saying is, if you choose to offer that coverage, then you must offer two things—only two things: The annual amount to be paid for the illness and treatment must be the same for physical as for severe or mental illness. You can't have two different annual payments. As to the lifetime aggregate coverage, you cannot have two different ones, if you cover mental health.

So, in a sense, I say to my fellow Senators, this choice is already provided for because insurance companies are going to provide ample choice. They are going to say we are not covering mental health. Would you like to buy that kind of policy? We are only saying if they choose to cover mental health that these two characteristics, qualities, must be present.

If the Senator chooses to say, for those companies that choose to write insurance policies that have mental health and, therefore, have this kind of coverage, people ought to be able to say, "I opt out of a portion of it." Then I submit we are right back where we started where we do not have coverage for the mentally ill because people who do not have any problems will opt out of it, and there will not be coverage under even those cases where policies have it expressly because the decision has been made—because the decision has been made—to include it.

So from my standpoint, I will very soon move to table this. I say to everyone that I think, if it were adopted and implemented literally, I believe we will have done away with the kind of coverage we seek to provide within the confines of a policy that the offset chooses—coverage for mental illness.

I yield the floor.

Mr. WELLSTONE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Very briefly, I say openly that I could go through in a kind of logical way all of the specifics of it. But I believe the amendment of my good friend from Colorado guts this amendment in the second degree. I think what he most objects to is the idea of any kind of standard. We just voted on a standard. That is what we just did. That is the vote we just took. It was 98 votes where we said, "Look, when it comes to the whole issue of the mother-child, we want to make sure there is at least a 48-hour period of time." That is what we just did. We are now saying in a very incremental way that when it comes to the mental health area we ought to deal with this discrimination and we ought to make sure that, at least with the lifetime or annual caps, you have some parity. If you begin to say, "I am all for the plans, but I do not want to have a situation where in fact there has to be in mental health coverage an equality with caps," then you move away from the whole strength of this.

So this is the opposite of the perfecting amendment. This amendment guts this legislation. I hope that it will be defeated resoundingly.

Mr. BROWN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. DOMENICI). The Senator from Colorado. Mr. BROWN. Mr. President, if I could, I would like to address the comments of the two previous speakers.

With all respect to my good friend from Minnesota, let me suggest that the vote we just had, at least in my view, is not quite the same as he implied. The record vote we just had was on the Frist amendment that perfected the Bradley amendment. I voted for that because it did improve the Bradley amendment. I certainly would confess to the Senator with regard to the underlying Bradley amendment that there are significant similarities, and I think he makes a valid point there. One difference, I might point out, is the cost differential for that very modest step, first, I might say, which is something that I hope would be in all policies, which is dramatically different than what I believe the cost impact with regard to the mental health coverage is.

Second, Mr. President, with regard to the statement of the distinguished Senator from New Mexico with regard to his point in regard to choice being still present, if his amendment passes, I think that is a valid point if either choice is retained. Unfortunately, the choice, though, as to whether or not you have any mental coverage, if you do not want to go with the higher limit, you have to drop all coverage, this amendment would make it clear that you retain the choice as to the level of coverage. I think that is the crux of it.

Why is that significant? It may be possible to afford 10,000 dollars' worth of coverage, or 100,000 dollars' worth of coverage, or 1 million dollars' worth of coverage. But it may not be possible to pay for $10 million of coverage. Does that mean, if you can't go with the higher level, that you are not allowed to have any choice at all? Unless the Brown amendment passes, the second-degree amendment, that is exactly what it means. If the Brown amendment passes, it means that you are allowed to have choices as to the coverage levels you may wish for mental health.

It seems to me that is fundamentally a question of choice and an important part of it. And it is vital for our consumers to retain that option.

I yield the floor.

Mr. BENNETT addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah.

Mr. BENNETT. I have listened to this debate with great interest. I find myself philosophically agreeing with the Senator from Colorado about the issue of choice, but I intend to oppose his amendment because it ignores the reality of our current health care structure and raises an issue that I have raised before and will raise again and again and again as we deal with the health care circumstance.

He uses in his amendment the word "consumers." The fact is that consumers do not buy health insurance. Individual consumers do not buy health insurance except in very rare cases. Companies buy health insurance. Employers buy health insurance.

In my view, that is one of the main things that is wrong with our health care system, that individual consumers are not allowed choice. We are forced to take whatever our employers decide to choose on our behalf.

I have said on this floor before I had a better health care plan before I came to the Senate than I have now. Why? Because the employer for whom I worked did a better job from my point of view than the U.S. Government does in choosing plans. If I were an individual consumer buying health care the way I buy an automobile, I would have chosen to bring that health care plan with me when I came from one employer to the other employer. But because of the way our health care system is structured, we are not allowed to do that. We, as individual consumers, are not allowed to make those kinds of choices. So let us understand that when the Senator from Colorado talks about consumers making choices, he is using the language of the marketplace that simply does not apply in health care.

We had a long battle on this floor for many weeks over the idea of allowing individuals to set up savings accounts from which they could purchase health services. We finally had a compromise saying that we would only allow 750,000 people to do that. If we cannot find a more dramatic statement than that fact that underlies that consumers, that is, individuals, are not allowed to make these kinds of decisions, then I do not know where we would find a more dramatic statement.

I would like in coming Congresses to restructure the system around medical savings accounts and around consumer choice. I think that is the ultimate solution, and if we get to that point, then I think we can consider the amendment of the Senator from Colorado. But when we are stuck with the circumstance we are stuck with now where decisions are made by somebody other than individuals, I think the amendment of the Senator from New Mexico is an appropriate one, and I intend to oppose the second-degree amendment and support the amendment of the Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. BROWN. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. BENNETT. I would be happy to yield for a question.

Mr. BROWN. It is my understanding the Senator has favored letting employers give employees choices. Would I be fair and accurate in saying that, if the DOMENICI amendment passes, it would preclude employers offering, making available to their employees a choice as to the various levels of mental health coverage if they differ?

Mr. BENNETT. It is my understanding, in response to the Senator's question, that an employer would not be precluded from offering whatever he wanted. From my own experience as an employer, let me describe to the Senator what we offered to our employees. Under the cafeteria plan proposal, we say to our employees that we have x number of benefit dollars. You tell us how you want us to spend them on your behalf. And under a cafeteria plan approach—a 125(c) plan, I think it is described in the Tax Code—an employer could say, here is a mental health care plan of x amount of coverage. Here is a mental health care plan of y amount of coverage. Here is a mental health care plan of z amount of coverage. And here is a physical health care plan of x amount of coverage, and you get to pick.

The employee under those circumstances could say, "I want $10,000 of coverage in mental health care under this plan, and as a second option, I want a plan that has $1 million worth of physical coverage."

Yes, I get, in effect, the same thing the Senator is talking about, but I have to buy two plans to do it and there is nothing in the current law or nothing in the Domenici-Wellstone amendment that would prevent an employer from offering that kind of circumstance.

Mr. BROWN. To follow up, if I may, my understanding of the reading of the Domenici amendment is that he does exempt from these limitations restrictions to small employers. That, I think, is a commendable aspect of his amendment. But I do not see an amendment that provides the exemption that the Senator just talked about. As a matter of fact, the way I read the amendment—and perhaps the Senator will want to clarify it or set me straight on it—the way I read it, it says precisely that you cannot do what the Senator describes, that you cannot have a plan that has $1 million for physical coverage and $100,000 for mental health coverage.

Mr. BENNETT. You cannot have a single plan that has that discrimination, but if under a 125(c) cafeteria plan you say we are going to offer separate plans and you buy both, you could get that effect if the employee made that kind of choice.

Mr. BROWN. I appreciate the Senator making that point. I think it is a very important point, that you do retain that option at least in the cafeteria plan.

Mr. BENNETT. That is right. An employer who does not have a cafeteria plan would not face that option. But if by passage of this we encourage employers to move to a 125(c) plan, a cafeteria plan, I think that is all to the good. My underlying point is that the consumer does not make these choices, which I think is wrong and needs to be changed at some point when we restructure our health care system.

Mr. BROWN. If the Senator would permit me another.

Mr. BENNETT. Surely.

Mr. BROWN. It is this Senator's view that the option that the Senator just described for the employer about the cafeteria plan, which I think is an important option, is the option that ought to be preserved for other consumers who do not fit in the small employer option.

Mr. BENNETT. I agree with the Senator, but I do not think this legislation is the place in which to do it.

Mr. GRAMM addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BENNETT). The Senator from Texas.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, what we have before us is a very bad amendment with very good intentions. What this amendment in essence is saying is that we in the Senate know better than employers and workers what kind of health insurance coverage they need.

This amendment overrides the decision making of those workers who are affected by this amendment, and a very large portion of the population of the country will be affected.

We are going to say to them that we know better. You may think that you want different limits for traditional physical health insurance than mental health coverage, but we know better than you and are going to make you buy the coverage with increased mental health limits. The incredible paradox is that the only way you can escape this is to drop mental health coverage altogether.

This is an unfunded mandate. If we had a proposal before us tonight to raise taxes to provide this benefit, I doubt it would get 30 votes. But what we have is a proposal tonight where "Big Brother" Congress, know-it-all Congress, perfect-insight Congress, is going to say that even if you are a young worker and are having trouble buying health insurance and remaining competitive in the job market, we are going to force you to balloon your mental health coverage, as commendable as that might be.

How wonderful it would be if everybody in America could afford this coverage. But what we are saying is, if you have any mental coverage in your plan, we are going to make you pay for a coverage limit up to the amount you have for traditional physical ailments. In the process we are going to drive up the cost of health insurance. We are going to reduce the choices that people have. The Senator from Colorado is saying if you want to mandate that insurance companies offer the coverage, then do it, but do not make people buy it if they do not want it.

I would like to remind my colleagues—none of whom are having difficulty buying health insurance—that even though this may sound great from our point of view, the problem with private health insurance is young working couples are having trouble paying for the health insurance they have. And, to the extent that this bill drives up the cost of hiring people, it will cost people their jobs, it will force companies who cannot afford to provide this benefit to eliminate all mental health coverage, and it will force working families to do without, because every penny that goes towards health insurance comes right out of the pocket of the worker. Every economic study done, including studies by the administration, count fringe benefits as part of the wage package. What we are doing to young couples who are trying to make ends meet, who want health insurance in case Johnny falls down the steps, is saying that you are going to have to pay for this extensive mental health coverage whether you want it or not. This amendment says that Congress supposedly knows what is better for you than you yourself do—it assumes that Congress is capable of making better decisions.

I totally and absolutely reject this. We adopted an amendment similar to this, but we adopted it when the majority leader, Senator Dole, made it clear that we were never going to see it emerge from conference—yet we ended up in conference with serious negotiations about really doing this.

I, frankly, think it is outrageous that, on an appropriations bill, we are getting ready to mandate that working people and businesses provide a benefit, whether they want it or not; that they pay for it, whether they want it or not; and we are doing exactly what the American people are continually outraged about: injecting our value judgments over theirs. We are saying that we know better than you know—that you really need this expanded mental health coverage, even if you do not want it and even if you can not afford it.

The point is, mental health care may be a wonderful thing. If we could snap our fingers and have everybody in America covered, it would be great. The truth, however, is that we cannot. This is expensive coverage. It is not an accident that private health insurance policies normally have differentials. In fact, in many cases, people do not have mental health coverage.

We have not had a tremendous amount of experience with mental health coverage under a third party payment system, where the insurance company is paying for it. I know we can get into a lengthy debate about experience of various States. I have seen estimates as high as 15-percent increase, if you force people to pay for mental care for alcohol and drug rehabilitation. I do not know how to pull that apart. But the point is, whatever the costs, how dare we, in the freest society in the history of the world, attempt to play God by telling people what kind of health insurance they must have.

I think the amendment that has been offered by the Senator from New Mexico is perfectly reasonable—more than reasonable. It simply says to insurance companies: You do not really live in a free society, you can not decide what product you want to sell, instead we are going to mandate that you sell this policy. Indeed, we are going to use the police power of the State to make you sell this policy. But, at least the Senator from Colorado says: We are not going to force young working couples, whose jobs might be threatened, whose ability to afford physical health insurance might be threatened—we are not going to make them buy it.

It seems to me that is the issue. In terms of somehow relating this to medical savings accounts, that is the most contorted logic I have ever heard in my life. The point of medical savings accounts is that, under the current tax law, if you buy low-deductible insurance it is tax free. But if you buy high-deductible insurance and you put the difference in a savings account, then you have to pay taxes on that difference. In essence, we are making people, through the Tax Code, buy low-deductible insurance. We are putting people in a position where, when they are buying health care, it is like going to the grocery store and having a grocery insurance policy, where 95 percent of what you put in your grocery basket is going to be paid for by grocery insurance. Needless to say, if you had such a policy, you would eat differently, and so would your dog—this is part of the problem.

What medical savings accounts do is expand choices. What the Domenici amendment does is limits choices. What gives us the right to say that people should be forced to buy health insurance that provides coverage which they otherwise would not choose to buy? Who are we to say that we have made this value judgment, that mental health care and physical health care are equal? Furthermore, who are we to say that if you have a policy which has a certain limit on physical care, and if you have any element of mental care in that policy, you are going to be forced to have the same limits on mental health care as well?

Let me tell you what this amendment would do. This amendment would drive up the cost of health insurance, it would drive up payroll costs, it would increase the cost of employing workers, and, therefore, people would lose their jobs.

Some courageous Members were willing to stand up and be counted upon on the issue of the minimum wage. How is this issue any different? How is this at all different? The plain truth is, this is not different. What this amendment would do is impose an unfunded mandate on workers and businesses. This will drive up unemployment. It will limit freedom. It will drive up the cost of health care. It will reduce the number of people who are covered by health insurance. And, finally, in the most perverted provision of this amendment, it will induce people to drop mental health coverage rather than face these expanded limits.

So, I know we have danced around this issue before. I know that, in a form people thought would go to conference and die there, we have voted on this before. I was proud to vote against it then and I am going to be proud to vote against it now. I think the Brown amendment is an amendment that makes the underlying amendment dramatically better. Because what the Brown amendment says, in its simplest form, is people have to offer this coverage for sale, but you do not have to buy it.

If you believe in freedom, if you believe in the right of people to choose you will vote for the Brown amendment. I would remind my colleagues who talked about lack of choice—there is a choice. If you do not like the health insurance your employer is providing, you do have an option. We do not have indentured labor in this country. We do not allow the enforcement of indentured labor contracts. People have a right to change jobs, and in fact people change jobs every day because of health insurance, because they want it and they want to expand their freedom.

This is an amendment that limits freedom. This is an amendment that is an unfunded mandate of the worst sort. This is an amendment which has the Congress choosing for consumers, choosing for their employers, and I think it is absolutely wrong. I strongly oppose the underlying amendment and I strongly support the Brown amendment, which simply tries to preserve consumer choice.

I would think that the authors of the underlying amendment would accept the Brown amendment because all the Brown amendment says is that, while the insurance coverage has to be offered, if the consumer does not want it, cannot afford it, feels it threatens his or her job, or if it threatens the viability of the company, you do not have to buy it. You either believe in freedom or you do not.

If you believe in freedom, you are not for the Domenici amendment. If you believe in freedom, you are for the Brown amendment. Those are strong words but they are words that exactly fit the case before us.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I have heard the distinguished Senator categorize the words of my good friend, the occupant of the chair, as "preposterous," or what was it you chose to say, Senator? I think that is probably a good paraphrase.

Let me suggest the entire debate by the Senator from Texas has been preposterous. First, it is wrong on the facts; and, second, it is wrong on the logic; and, third, it is a gross exaggeration if ever I have heard one. So, let me tell you the facts. And the Senator might do well to listen, because they are the facts.

Mr. GRAMM. I will listen.

Mr. DOMENICI. And I appreciate it, if you will.

First of all, the only way we have been able to judge the cost of these various insurance changes is to get the Congressional Budget Office to tell us. Let me tell you what they said about this amendment. Sixteen one-hundredths of 1 percent possible increase. Sixteen hundredths of 1 percent possible increase. Caveat, they said—caveat, we are not taking into consideration that it will probably be substantially less, if we know the effect of managed care and HMO's.

Would anybody gather from the argument of the distinguished Senator from Texas that we are talking about that? Let me convert it to an insurance policy's average costs: $6 to $8 a year. That is the choice between freedom and servitude, $6 a year, or $8.

That is freedom from being in jail or being forced to be indentured—$6 or $8 a year.

Let me talk about eliminating choice. I just asked what the conference report on the Kassebaum-Kennedy bill passed by, how many votes. I looked and found my good friend, the Senator from Texas, voted for that. Though I might suggest to him—and I am his good friend—when he makes an argument I do not agree with, I make it as forcible as he, perhaps not as intellectually as he.

Having said that, I noted he voted for that bill. Mr. President, if ever you wanted to make an argument about eliminating freedom of choice, that was the bill to do it on, because you no longer have any choice to say, "I don't want to buy insurance that covers the preexisting condition of my neighbor." Right? You say, "I want another insurance policy, because I want the right to choose between coverage of preexisting conditions or not."

Let me suggest, if there are degrees of freedom, you just waive freedom there in an astronomical way, and if you are losing some freedom here, you are losing it in a little, tiny, almost immeasurable quantity.

So let me repeat to the U.S. Senate what this issue is about. This issue is about whether or not you want to take a little tiny step toward providing some kind of parity of treatment under insurance policies in this land to those who suffer mental illness.

Let me tell you what it does not do. It does not require the kind of coverage, the amount of copayment, the deductibles. Those are all left up to the insurance companies. All it says, I say to my friend from Kentucky, is if you write an insurance policy that covers mental illness, then write it for the aggregate coverage level that is identical to the coverage level for physical illnesses. Is that a monumental thing? Most policies aggregate between $500,000 and $1 million. That is what you are saying: If you write one with mental illness, do not put one in at $50,000 and cancel at $1 million. Just put 1 million dollars' worth of coverage.

I repeat, this is not a huge imposition of new costs on anyone. My friend from Texas says there is no experience with the coverage of mental illness. That is absolutely wrong. There is plenty of experience with the coverage of mental illness. There are all kind of insurance policies out there with coverage of mental illness without discrimination on the aggregate amount. Many companies already know what it will cost, and they know what it will save.

All we are suggesting is that there are a few million American families out there who think they have insurance coverage, and they find that their 17-year-old daughter away at college got depression in her freshman year—could not make a choice, all of a sudden could not sleep, all of a sudden gets deathly sick, and all of a sudden the doctors say she has severe depression.

All of a sudden they say, "Well, we have insurance." They wake up and ask somebody. Surely, if the father of the house had a heart attack, he can stay in a hospital 6 weeks. He can get 300,000 dollars' worth of surgery. But for that daughter, if you look at the policy, and it probably said $50,000. And they thought they had insurance. If you have severe depression and get hospitalized and then have to have the treatment that follows it, $50,000 is not even going to begin to care for them, just like $50,000 will not touch bypass surgery and all of the rehabilitation that comes with it, or severe cancer with six operations and chemotherapy.

That is all we are saying. If you are going to write an insurance policy, insurance industry of America, businesses in America, if you are going to cover your employees and you are going to cover physical ailments and mental illness, just make sure that the aggregate amount is the same.

That is not making any huge, momentous decision for the populace of the United States. It is a very simple, forthright, practical approach to insurance coverage.

As a matter of fact, the only reason they are writing it out of the policies now and writing it lower is because it is cheaper. When people start finding out and asking about it and wanting it, then they will cover them, but in many instances, it is already too late. But if you make it that they must have these aggregates in all of the policies, I repeat, the denial of freedom is so insignificant and the cost is so insignificant that it is a trivialization, it trivializes the use of the words "denying freedom of choice." It is truly turning monumental words that we cherish and worry about, like "freedom," and attaching those to something as insignificant as what we have just described here on the floor.

Mr. President, I move to table the Brown-Gramm amendment and ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. GRAMM. I ask the Senator to withhold so that I might respond.

Mr. DOMENICI. How much time would you like?

Mr. GRAMM. I want time to respond, or I can suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New Mexico withhold?

Mr. DOMENICI. I will let the Senator respond.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, every Member of the Senate voted for the Kassebaum-Kennedy bill. I stood on the floor and made it very clear that by moving toward community rating, we were driving up health insurance costs.

What I wanted was medical savings accounts as a method to promote competition and empower the consumer to make rational choices. Like most bills, it represented a tradeoff: an expansion of freedom in one area, a reduction of it in another. I see no expansion of freedom here.

No. 2. If this provision really costs one-sixth of 1 percent, why isn't it a matter of course in insurance policies? If this provision is so cheap and so good, why is it not provided?

I will offer another amendment saying that if, under this provision, the cost of insurance rises more than 1 percent that this provision will be void, and we will see if that will be supported.

Everyone who has ever argued that we should diminish freedom to promote a political objective has said that the political objective is big and the diminution of freedom is small. The point remains and is irrefutable that under this amendment, we are going to make you buy coverage that you may not want. We are going to make employers provide coverage that they may not be able to pay for unless they drop mental health coverage altogether. I believe that this is clearly a step in the wrong direction.

Obviously, any of us can stand up and talk about things that any family would like to have. Wouldn't any family in America like to have comprehensive mental health care when a 17-year-old child in college comes down with severe depression? Obviously, they would. But there are also a lot of families who would like to have a 17-year-old in college.

There are a lot of people who would like to have better jobs than they have. The point is, life is about choices. Life is about choices that we have to make in a free society.

Senator BROWN says that we can require insurance companies to offer the policy. But the Domenici amendment says you also have to buy the policy.

You have to buy this coverage whether or not you want it, whether or not you can afford it, and whether or not it threatens your job or your company. Why? Because we, the Congress, in our infinite wisdom, have decided that this is something you need to have.

It seems to me, if there was just one clear message in the last election, it was stop making decisions for us in Washington, let us make decisions for ourselves.

If this policy really cost one-sixth of 1 percent, then let people choose to buy it, let companies decide to offer it. I do not believe it will cost one-sixth of 1 percent. I believe we are talking about a very expensive rider to insurance policies.

I think that this rider is going to drive up the cost of health insurance and, in effect, deny people who are having trouble buying insurance the ability to cover themselves or their child should he or she fall down, break an arm, or, God forbid, be in an accident. We are going to jeopardize their ability to have any health insurance at all. Further, we are going to jeopardize their ability to have a job, and are going to induce many companies to drop health coverage altogether. Soon people will find out that if they have a child that has a mental problem, they will not even have $50,000 of coverage, let alone coverage equal to the rest of their policy.

The point is this, if this is so cheap, if this is so irrelevant from the point of view of cost, why not let people choose it on their own? Or better yet, why not have the insurance company be required to provide it and then let people decide if they want it based on their analysis of cost and benefits? Or are they so foolish, are the American people so naive, so unaware of their own needs and their own wants that they must have us tell them what they need? I do not think so.

It seems to me that the Brown amendment has the saving grace of letting people choose. You force the insurance companies to offer this coverage whether they want to offer it or not, but at least you let people decide if they want it. I cannot understand, for the life of me, why people are opposed to this. If really this coverage costs one-sixth of 1 percent, we would all want it; we would all choose it. The only reason you would not let people choose it on their own is if you do not believe that one-sixth of one percent number, or you believe that people would not choose it. The point is, freedom is the right to make wrong decisions as well as to make right decisions. I simply go back to a fundamental point which, in my opinion, despite all the wonderful speeches you can give about this—Bismarck once said, "Never does a socialist stand on stronger ground than when he argues for the best principles of health."

Who can stand and argue against somebody having coverage for a physical or mental ailment? No one can. We all want it. We wish we could magically make it happen. But we should not make it magically happen by mandating that people have it, by forcing people to pay for it whether they want to or not, without knowing what it costs, without knowing the ramifications of this, all on an appropriations bill at 7:30 p.m. at night in the month that we are going to adjourn the Senate.

I think that this amendment violates everything that many of us claim that we stand for. I do not doubt the good intentions, nor have I ever doubted the good intentions, of the Senator who is offering this amendment. But this is bad public policy. It flies in the face of everything the 1994 election said because it denies people the right to choose.

If we want to preserve this right to choose, not for the insurance companies, but for the consumer, then it is critical that the Brown amendment be adopted.

I yield the floor.

Mr. BROWN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Colorado.

Mr. BROWN. Mr. President, I shall not prolong the debate. We have had excellent comments by both sides. I appreciate the very thoughtful comments that Senator DOMENICI has made and Senator GRAMM has made because I think they enlighten debate.

I hope Members, when they vote on this, will do one thing: look at the amendment and read it. And let me just read the words because I think they are important to focus on. Here are the words of this amendment:

Consumers shall retain the freedom to choose a group health care plan with coverage limitations of their choice even if such coverage limitations for mental health services are inconsistent with section 2 of this title.

Mr. President, that is all this amendment does. It retains, in the consumer, the right to choose.

I yield the floor, Mr. President.

Mr. DOMENICI addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. DOMENICI. I believe we have had debate on this. I just want to, one more time, suggest that what is missing from the Senator from Texas' discussion is—I would put it this way—there was total misunderstanding as I listened to him talk about severe mental illness and the marketplace and the neighborhoods of America. Because that illness has been so stigmatized for so long, it has even stigmatized the insurance policies of this land.

We started out 30 or 40 years ago recognizing that we came out of the Dark Ages with reference to severe mental illness and crazies and loonies, and we started understanding that people really were sick. Yet, we dragged everybody kicking and screaming to understand that a mother or a father with a child with schizophrenia had nothing whatsoever to do by way of treatment or care with that child getting sick.

Pretty soon we got to recognize that even that famous old Dr. Freud was wacko because you could not talk people out of mental illness. You can have them on the sofa and chair and talk until you are blue in the face, and if you are a schizophrenic, you are sick. What happened is, society just resisted that. And I guess part of it is that every now and then somebody who is mentally sick kills someone and there we are again talking about "those people."

But let me tell you, there are millions of Americans who have members of their family with one of these dread illnesses. All we are suggesting in this measure, and I repeat, if an insurance company writes insurance that covers mental illness—now if you want choice, understand, they do not have to cover mental illness—but if they choose to, we just say, let us get rid of the stigma and cover them in total dollar coverage to the same extent you cover the other illnesses.

If they want to triple the copayment, I say to Senator KENNEDY, because they want to keep people away from psychiatrists, there is nothing in this measure that says they cannot do that. We are just saying, when you insure somebody that is mentally ill, and they get real sick, make sure they are the same limitations on total coverage that people who get cancer or diabetes or tuberculosis or triple bypass have. And that is all it says.

That is the reason it is not going to cost very much. The amendment that passed early on, where we mandated coverage and we mandated parity of actual literal coverage, was very, very different. And my friend from Texas might have made a very serious argument there, but in this case that is not the situation.

So I believe, to say if you are writing mental health coverage it has to have these limits and turn around and say, on the other hand, even if you have done that, insurance company, we have the right to say, well, lower the level and give us another kind of coverage with less of that because we want freedom of choice—the choice is clear.

You can buy an insurance policy without mental health coverage or you can buy in the manner discussed so eloquently on the floor by the Senator from Utah, if that applies. So having said that, I move to table and ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I ask the Senator on one point to allow me to respond.

Mr. DOMENICI. I would be pleased to.

Mr. GRAMM. I do understand. I grew up in a household with someone who had mental illness. I grew up in a household where nobody had health insurance. We did not have health insurance for physical or mental ailments. But the point is, if you are going to mandate coverage, then you will end up with more people who have no health insurance, and you are going to have more people without jobs.

The point is that under this amendment you lose your right to choose. To keep a policy that has limited mental health coverage, you either have to take no mental health coverage or take coverage equal to that set for physical illness coverage. The Brown amendment gives you choice. It seems to me that is what we want.

My problem here is not that I do not understand. My problem is that I do understand. My problem is that I do understand what this does economically. I do understand that this takes away from people the right to choose. That is why I am opposed to it. There certainly is no politics in opposing this amendment. We should all be for giving everybody everything. Unfortunately, we live in a world where people have to choose. When we choose for them, they not only have less freedom, they do not get to choose to spend their money as they would choose to spend it.

I believe families know better than we do. Even though our intentions may be wonderful and even though we may wish everybody had mental health coverage, families have to make hard choices when they have to pay. Businesses have to make hard choices. All I am saying is let them choose. If you want to make insurance companies provide the coverage, do not make people buy it. Have it available. Let them look at the cost. If it costs one-sixth of 1 percent, they will buy it if they want it. I would certainly buy it at that cost.

My fear is we are going to find out later this is a very costly add-on, and we are going to price people out of the health insurance they have now, and they are going to end up with both physical and mental ailments, and they will not be covered for either.

Mr. WELLSTONE. I know my colleagues are anxious to move forward. Although there is so much I want to say for the record, I yield.

Mr. DOMENICI. I move to table the amendment, and I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. NICKLES. I announce that the Senator from Utah [Mr. HATCH], the Senator from Oregon [Mr. HATFIELD], and the Senator from Alaska [Mr. MURKOWSKI], are necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Oregon [Mr. HATFIELD], would vote "yea".

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 75, nays 22, as follows:

[Rollcall Vote No. 273 Leg.]

The motion to lay on the table the amendment (No. 5195) was agreed to.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. FORD. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, for the information of all Members, we are working now on getting a UC typed up that would lay out how the time will be used for the next hour. We are in the process now of typing up an agreement that would lay out the debate, and the votes over the next hour and a half. I think that would allow us to make good progress and be able to get to the conclusion of the VA-HUD bill, and either go to final passage after that, or, depending on a couple of other things, we are working on final passage and could have stacked votes Tuesday morning. But we will have that worked out momentarily.

The next thing we will do is to go to the next pending amendment for a vote. Senator GRAMM I believe has a second-degree amendment.

THE DEFENSE OF MARRIAGE ACT

Mr. LOTT. In the meantime, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now turn to consideration of Calendar No. 499, H.R. 3396, the Defense of Marriage Act.

Mr. DASCHLE. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

CLOTURE MOTION

Mr. LOTT. I move that the Senate proceed to the H.R. 3396, and I send a cloture motion to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The cloture motion having been presented under rule XXII, the Chair directs the clerk to read the motion.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

CLOTURE MOTION

We, the undersigned Senators, in accordance with the provisions of Rule XXII of the Standing Rules of the Senate, hereby move to bring to a close debate on the motion to proceed to H.R. 3396, the Defense of Marriage Act:

Senators Trent Lott, Bob Smith, Conrad Burns, Rod Grams, Larry E. Craig, Judd Gregg, Jim Inhofe, Hank Brown, Don Nickles, Dan Coats, Chuck Grassley, Craig Thomas, Frank H. Murkowski, Lauch Faircloth, Richard Shelby, Slade Gorton, Phil Gramm.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I want our colleagues to know that I have been discussing this back and forth with the Democratic leader. He was aware that I was going to do this. We are working on a number of other issues that are not directly related necessarily to this. We also have an understanding that we are working out on exactly what time this vote might occur.

But I have just filed a cloture motion on the motion to proceed to H.R. 3396. Under rule XXII, the cloture vote will occur—we will either have this occur on Monday or agree to a time on Tuesday. I believe we are going to agree to a time on Tuesday when this vote will occur. So I think we are getting cooperation on that.

If we continue to work toward an agreement on the VA-HUD appropriations bill, and go ahead and get started next on the Interior appropriations bill, then we would probably have this vote on Tuesday morning around 10 o'clock. But we will make that official later on.

I now withdraw the motion to proceed.

Mr. DASCHLE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion is withdrawn.

The Democratic leader.

Mr. DASCHLE. I just wanted to take a moment to explain that it is not our desire necessarily to hold up this piece of legislation. There is support on our side as well. Unfortunately, the majority leader has not been able to work out an agreement with us to accommodate a number of Senators on our side who wish to offer amendments. It was for that reason that I objected tonight.

Obviously, we will have a good debate about the bill. It will be my hope we could offer amendments, but at least at this time it does not appear to be likely. We will continue to work together and try to find a way to resolve these issues, but at least tonight that has not been resolved.

I yield the floor.

Mr. LOTT. I yield the floor, Mr. President.

DEPARTMENTS OF VETERANS AFFAIRS AND HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT, AND INDEPENDENT AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 1997

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill.

Mr. DOMENICI addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, while the distinguished majority leader is here, I would just like to state I think Senator GRAMM is going to offer an amendment which I will accept, and then we will vote on the Domenici-Wellstone amendment as amended by the Gramm amendment.

AMENDMENT NO. 5196 TO AMENDMENT NO. 5194

Mr. GRAMM addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mr. GRAMM. I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows.

The Senator from Texas [Mr. GRAMM] proposes an amendment numbered 5196 to amendment No. 5194.

Mr. DOMENICI. Could we have order, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will suspend.

The Senate is not in order. Senators will take their conversations to the cloakroom, please, so the Senator from Texas can be heard.

The Senator from Texas.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, it is a very short amendment. It will minimize the debate if we just have it read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

At the appropriate place in the amendment, insert the following: Notwithstanding the provisions of this title, if the provisions of this title result in a one percent or greater increase in the cost of a group health plan's premiums, the purchaser is exempt from the provisions of this title.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, this amendment says that if Senator DOMENICI is wrong, and there are more than de minimis costs in expanding this coverage, and those costs exceed 1 percent, then the purchaser of that policy would be exempt.

I think this is a good stopgap measure. If the Senator is right and this coverage can be provided for one-sixth of 1 percent, then it will be provided. If it raises the cost of the policy more than 1 percent, the purchaser of the policy would be exempt.

I think it does improve the underlying amendment, and I am grateful the Senator has accepted it.

Mr. DOMENICI addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, consistent with everything I knew when I brought the amendment to the floor,
